CLACHAN-CANTYRE is a village in the parish of Kilcalmonell and poor combination of Lochgilphead, lying near the mouth of Loch Tarbert and on the road from Tarbert to Campbeltown, 11 miles south-west of the former and 27 north-east of the latter, the road following the western shore of Cantyre through most of its course. The parish church is in this village, and there is also a Free church. Mrs. Margaret B. Mackinnon is the proprietress of the larger part of the village; the other portion is in the estate of Ronachan, and belongs to Miss Gladys Mackinnon. In the vicinity, on a hill called Dunskeig, to the north-west, is a vitrified fort on a large scale, and another contiguous stone fort in ruins; and among the hills to the east are several fresh water lochs, well stocked with trout.

COLL, a parish in Mull poor combination, is an island lying about 2 miles north of Tiree and 10 west of Ardnamurchan Point; it is 13 miles from north to south by a breadth of 2 to 4 miles; its coast is indented by several small bays (the largest, known as Loch Breachacha, runs about a mile into the land), but there is only one tolerable harbour, called Armagour. Close to the modern castle, the property of Charles Edward Stewart esq. who is the proprietor of the island, are the ruins of a castle. The chief industry is cheese making, for which Coll has attained a wide reputation. A fair is held here in May and October, on the Tuesday before those in Mull. The area comprises 18,316 acres; valuation, £3,322; population in 1911, 389.

COLONSAY and ORONSAY are islands lying to the west of Jura and south of the mouth of the Firth of Lorn, 11 miles south of the Ross of Mull. Together they form a united parish about 12 miles in length, Oronsay, the most southern, being only 2 miles in extent; the division between the two islands is a narrow strait, dry at low water. There are Established and Baptist churches on Colonsay. It was here that St. Columba landed on his arrival from Ireland in 563, and on Oronsay first founded his college, moving later on to Iona. An abbey was founded here at Kilouran, at a subsequent date, of which there are now no remains, but at Kilchattan are remains of a chapel with a burial ground and two monoliths called "Carraghean." On Oronsay there are extensive remains of a priory founded in the 14th century, consisting of a church, 78 by 18 feet, retaining its altar, and a large cloister, besides a fine sculptured cross, 12 feet in height, bearing on the circular head a representation of the Crucifixion, and on the shaft part of an inscription to Colinus, a prior, who died in 1510: north-east of the church is another round-headed cross now shattered: there are also several slabs carved with figures of ecclesiastics and warriors. Colonsay is the property of Lady Strathcona and Mount Royal. The area of the united parish is 11,076 acres; gross rental, £1,920; population in 1911, 389, of whom 267 were in Colonsay.

CRAIGNISH is a parish in the west of Argyllshire, bounded on the north by the parish of Kilmelford, on the east by the parish of Kilmartin and on the south and west by the Sound of Jura. It stretches from north-east to south-west in the form of a long peninsula, about 10 miles in length and from 2 to 4 miles broad. At the Point of Aird in the extreme south-west there is a passage between the shore and an outlying island, called the "Doruis Mor," through which the tides rush with great violence as they sweep on and help to form the whirlpool of Corryvreckan, 5 or 6 miles off the land between the islands of Jura and Scarba. The steamers on the royal route to Oban and the north pass through the Doruis immediately after leaving the Crinan canal and the flow of the tides is watched with great interest by the passengers. There is an Established church. Colonel F. R. T. Trench-Gascoigne D.S.O., J.P. Mrs. Lindsay and J. A. Campbell esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 9,283 acres; rateable value, £2,657; population in 1911, 322.

DUNOON AND KILMUN

DUNOON with KILMUN constitute a united parish in the south-eastern district of Argyllshire: the police burgh of Dunoon and seaside town is situated on the Firth of Clyde, 3 miles south of Holy Loch, 4 from Gourock station on the Caledonian railway, on the opposite side of the Clyde, 27 south-east of Inveraray, 30 west of Glasgow and 8 west of Greenock; Kilmun is 6½ miles from Dunoon. The head quarters of the Sheriff court were transferred from Inveraray to Dunoon in 1903, and the burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine town councillors: it has no regular trade, but depends upon its summer visitors. A system of filtration for the water supply has been adopted, and in 1906 a refuse destructor was built 1 mile north of the pier.

The town of Dunoon is built on the shores of two small bays (east and west), and extending for 2 miles in both directions are ranges of houses for the families who resort here in the summer season, and there are also many villas occupied by the merchants and professional men of Glasgow. The united parish extends 15 miles from north to south, by 8 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Strachur, north-east by Lochgoilhead, east and south by the Firth and west by Inverchaolain. There are Established, United Free and Catholic churches, Free Presbyterian and Gaelic Presbyterian and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1850, will seat 300 persons: the rectory, net yearly value £280, has been held since 1920 by the Rev. Charles Tindall Beale B.A. In the burial ground of the Established church are two massive freestone slabs, with armorial bearings and inscriptions, indicating the graves of Andrew Boyd, Bishop of Aberdeen, 1613-37, and Hector Maclean, Bishop, 1680-88. The Burgh Hall, in Argyll street, built in 1873, is of stone and contains a fine assembly room. The Sheriff Court House, in George street, a fine building of stone, erected in 1902, is used for county business and the sittings of the Sheriff's ordinary and small debt courts, which are held here every week and criminal courts as found convenient. The Glasgow and West of Scotland Convalescent Seaside Home, originated and promoted by the late Miss Beatrice Clugston, of Glasgow, was opened on the 14th of August, 1869, for the purpose of affording sea-air and bathing to invalids, and is a building of stone in the Romanesque style, available for over 300 inmates: the west wing and dining hall were extended in 1907, so as to provide for 50 additional inmates. The Dunoon and Cowal District Combination Hospital for Infectious Diseases affords 35 beds: there is also a Cottage Hospital. The Post Office, a building of stone, was erected in 1902. A Fire Brigade Station and Burgh Depot were erected in 1909 at a cost of about £3,000. A little to the west of the pier at Dunoon is a mount about 80 feet in height, on which stand the ruins of Dunoon castle, formerly regarded as one of the most formidable strongholds on the coast of Argyllshire; originally a royal residence, the hereditary keepership was bestowed by Robert Bruce on Sir Colin Campbell, of Loch Awe, through whom it came into the possession of the Dukes of Argyll. Queen Mary visited her sister, Lady Jane Stuart, at Dunoon Castle about 1563. The modern Castle of Dunoon, built in 1832, was purchased by the burgh commissioners for the benefit of the town: it contains a reading room, and the grounds are tastefully laid out as a recreation ground for the inhabitants and visitors. A pavilion of brick and rough cast, with a frontage of stone, erected at a cost of nearly £17,000, was opened in Aug. 1905, by H.R.H. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and contains a large concert hall and reception rooms. A recreation and pleasure ground with a cycling track was opened in 1905 for football, cricket &c.: here is held annually the Cowal Highland gathering. In 1906-7 the East Bay esplanade was rebuilt at a cost of £40,000: it has a maximum width of 120 feet and a minimum breadth of 60 feet, and now extends for 2 miles, joining Dunoon and Kirn. Facing the Firth is a very fine stone statue representing "Highland Mary." Fairs are held on the first Thursday in January and February for horses. Three newspapers are published here, viz.: "The Dunoon Herald and Cowal Advertiser," on Friday, "The Dunoon Observer and Argyllshire Standard," on Friday for Saturday, and the "Dunoon Advertiser," on Thursday.

HOLY LOCH, in this parish, is fully 3 miles long; the entrance is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, a mile and a half in width; at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig, the latter river flowing from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, 7 miles long and 1 broad, whose steep, rugged shores, rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast on a fine day to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the valley to Strachur or Loch Fyne is remarkable for wild scenery. Mrs. Long, Henry George Younger esq. Major John Henry Pigè-Leschallas J.P. Mrs. de Courcy Hamilton, Dr. R. S. Allan, Major James Pender and J. McArthur Moir esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the united parish comprises 44,606 acres; rateable value, £121,862 13s. 3d. including landward: population in 1911, 10,227: area of burgh, 1,006 acres; rateable value, £85,846; the population in 1911 was 6,859. Population of ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 5,489.

KILMUN is a village and quoad sacra parish in the parish, situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 6½ miles north from Dunoon, and 8 west from Greenock. The ancient collegiate church, founded in 1442 by Sir Duncan Campbell, of Loch Awe, has a tower, and is the burying place of the Campbell family; six of the Dukes of Argyll lie here, and some monuments are still in existence. There is also a United Free church in the village. About a quarter of a mile westward of the village is the Glasgow Abstainers' Union Seaside Home for Convalescents. A marble monument was erected here in 1906 to James Duncan, a former laird of Benmore, who by chemical researches greatly benefited the sugar refining industry. The population of Kilmun Parish Ward in 1911 was 1,374, and 915 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BLAIRMORE and Strone form a village in the parish, and will be found under the heading of Strone.

HUNTER'S QUAY is a village in this parish, and forms part of the burgh of Dunoon, from which it is distant 2 miles north-east, on the Firth of Clyde, and close to the mouth of the Holy Loch. Christ Church, the Episcopal church, is in this village.

KIRN is a village and quoad sacra parish in this parish, and is also part of the burgh of Dunoon, from which it is distant 1½ miles, on the Firth of Clyde. There is an Established church, opened in 1909: the old church is now used as a public hall: there is also a United Free church. Here is a school. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,582.

ARDENTINNY is a village and quoad sacra parish in this parish, situated 4 miles from Blairmore, 7 from Greenock and 12½ from Dunoon, on the west shore of Loch Long. There is a church of the Establishment and a school. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 192.

INNELLAN, also in this parish, contains the Episcopal church of St. Margaret, built in 1875. See under separate head.

GLENLEAN (or Caachaig) is a hamlet in this parish, situated 6 miles north-west, and 3 north-west from Sandbank. The surrounding country is mountainous, and in the vicinity are the Clyde Mills Co.'s gunpowder works, which are now entirely closed.

SANDBANK is a village in this parish, and will be found under a separate heading.

TOWARD is a hamlet in this parish, situated 4 miles south-west from Innellan and 8 from Dunoon. Here is a church of the Establishment and a school. Castle Toward is a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay esq. and now the residence of Major Andrew Coats D.S.O. The grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle, at one time the seat of the family of Lamont, of Ardlamont.

THE ISLANDS OF GIGHA AND CARA

GIGHA is an island off the western coast of Kintyre, about 7 miles south-west from the mouth of West Tarbert loch; it is 6 miles long by 2 to 3 broad, and with the islands of Cara and Gigulum forms a civil and ecclesiastical parish, the church of which is near the landing place at Gigha, 2 miles from the south end of the island, and facing it is a small but comfortable inn. At Kilchattan, a mile south, within a burial ground stands the ancient church of St. Catan, now roofless, though otherwise fairly perfect; it is 33 feet long, and over 15 feet wide, and has a narrow lancet at the east end, and one on each side, and by the east window lies the basin of an octagonal font: 2 miles north from Kilchattan, near Millbay stand three ruined hill-forts, and north of these, near Tarbert farm, is an ancient burying ground containing a much broken cross, 7 feet in height. Near Cairnbaan point, north-east of the island, is apparently another cemetery, containing stone cells or kirkvaens roofed with heavy slabs, and some incised with strange marks. The island of Cara, which is the property of John Ronald Moreton-Macdonald esq. D.L., J.P. who resides at Largie Castle, is divided from Gigha by a narrow rock-strewn channel, and is less than a mile in length, but contains a ruined chapel about 29 feet long, and of rude masonry: the narrow windows are square headed, and one has a height of 3 feet 4 inches. Major John Allen is the proprietor of the island of Gigha. The area of the parish comprises 3,662 acres; rateable value, £1,628; the population in 1911 was 326, of which 3 are in Cara Island.

GLENORCHY and INISHAIL form a united parish in the Lorne poor combination, lying to the north of Loch Awe, bounded on the west by Ardchattan, on the north by Lismore and Appin, and on the east by Perthshire; it extends 25 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth. The village and station of DALMALLY, on the Tyndrum and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, are in the south of the parish, and the West Highland railway runs close to the east boundary of the parish, with stations at Tyndrum and Bridge of Orchy, the latter being in the parish. The parish church is just outside Dalmally, on the road to Oban; the original foundation was of great antiquity and there are many old tombstones in the kirkyard. The southern portion of the parish includes the head of Loch Awe, which extends 26 miles in length from one to half a mile broad, its most attractive scenery being between here and Port Sonachan; the hills on each side are thickly clothed with timber and several small islands diversify its surface. On Inishail, a low grass-grown island near the north end of the loch are some remains, about 51 feet in length, of a reputed Cistercian nunnery, and apparently of the first Pointed period: surrounding the ruins is a burial ground, containing several carved slabs, and a now prostrate cross 6 feet in length. On a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilchurn Castle, supposed to have been built about 1440 by Sir Colin Campbell, the first knight of Glenorchy. Fairs for cattle are held at Glenorchy on the third Wednesday in March and fourth Tuesday in November.

CLADICH is a hamlet on Loch Awe, 10 miles north of Inveraray, and in this parish; a road to the left leads to Port Sonachan ferry, 3 miles distant, crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened 10 miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban. Here is an Established Mission church, and a Post office.

DALMALLY is a scattered village in the parish, 16 miles north-east of Inveraray and 24½ miles by rail from Oban, and beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in view of the vale of Glenorchy. Here are United Free and Free churches. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 146,628 acres; rateable value, £20,148; the population in 1911 was 1,098 in the civil and 931 in the ecclesiastical parish.

INVERARAY is a parish and royal burgh and the county town of Argyllshire; the burgh is situated on the western shore of Loch Fyne, at the south-west angle of a small bay, into which flow the rivers Aray and Shira, from which there is a ferry to St. Catherine's. Inveraray is about 15 miles south from Dalmally station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, and about the same distance east from Arrochar station on the West Highland (North British) railway, 102 west-by-north of Edinburgh, 60 north-west of Glasgow, 32 south-east of Oban, via Port Sonachan Ferry, and 42 via Dalmally, and 76 north-north-east of Campbeltown. The parish extends 15 miles from north-east to south-west, and is bounded north by Glenorchy, west by Kilchrenan, south by Kilmichael and east by Loch Fyne. Inveraray was erected into a burgh of charter, granted by Charles I. in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk and a treasurer. The Court House and Gaol, a substantial building of stone, stands on the shore. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May, August and last Tuesday in October; a burgh court is held occasionally, and the sheriff's court four times yearly. The Established church, in the main street, is a stone building with a spire, and services are conducted here both in Gaelic and English; the United Free church, erected in 1836, on land given by D. Paterson esq. is now closed, but a new church was built in 1844, at the south end of the town, at a cost of £1,700; the Episcopal church of All Saints, erected in 1886, at a cost of about £1,600, on a site given by the ninth Duke of Argyll, is a small edifice of stone, seating 142 persons; Rev. Henry William Gibson M.A., LL.B. rector. In the town are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited; the principal hotel is the "Argyll," beautifully situated near the chief entrance to Inveraray Castle.

On the town esplanade stands a sculptured stone cross, brought from Iona, and supposed to date from 1400; it is eight feet high and bears the following inscription:—"Hæc est crux nobilium virorum, videlicet, Dondcani, Meic Gyllichomghan, Patrici filii ejus, et Maelmore, filii Patrici, qui hanc crucem fieri faciebat." (This cross is in memory of noble men, viz., Duncan M'Comyn, Patrick, his son, and Ludovick, the son of Patrick, who caused this cross to be erected.) In a garden near the church is a small obelisk, which marks the place of execution, in the year 1685, of some persons of the name of Campbell, for preaching against the teachings of the Romish Church. A splendid view can be had of the surrounding scenery from the top of "Duniquaich," which in olden times was a beacon or watch tower, and is mentioned in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Legend of Montrose." Loch Fyne terminates about 9 miles from the town, and from the fineness of its scenery and the fame of its herrings is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the loch in a single season, until within the last twenty or thirty years, frequently amounted to £30,000; for some years it hardly yielded any, but recently the fish have been coming up in large shoals. The loch is 50 miles long, and is about 10 broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding 3 above Otter Ferry. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well-built quay, at the neck of which is a stone building, erected at a cost of upwards of £1,000, in memory of Elizabeth, late Duchess of Argyll, who died in 1878, and used as a coffee and reading room. Fairs for cattle are held at Inveraray on the last Friday in May and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July.

At the extremity of the bay stands Inveraray Castle, the seat of the Duke of Argyll; it is approached by a fine avenue of limes, and has extensive and well-wooded policies; the building is three-storied, of grey stone, in the Later Baronial style, somewhat formal in outline, being a square with rounded angles, which rise as towers one storey above the roof; the centre is occupied by a large square hall with a gallery around, giving access to the upper rooms; the hall is lighted by a square lantern tower, rising rather above the angle towers, and its walls are lined with about 150 stands of arms, being the muskets used by the Clan Campbell regiment at Culloden; the principal rooms open from the hall and are hung with some good tapestry and pictures; there are also two beautiful pedestals of a rare kind of red granite, or porphyry, obtained near the Ross of Mull. Upon the lawn is a brass gun that belonged to the admiral's ship "Florida," one of the "Invincible" Armada, blown up in Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put in through stress of weather. The gun, which was taken from the bay and is about 10 feet in length, is named the "Gunna-Cam," or "gleid gun." Two other Armada guns have also been added.

About a mile and a half north-east of Inveraray is Glen-Shira, in length about 6 miles, the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful, presenting gently-sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood. The Duke of Argyll is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 46,887 acres; rateable value of burgh, £2,377, of landward, £4,326; the population of the civil parish in 1911 was 1,204, including 521 in the royal burgh and 12 in shipping, but the parliamentary burgh (now, 1921, merged into the county) only contained 533. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 616.

GLENARAY is a small ecclesiastical parish, and lies in the north of the parish. Population in 1911, 303.

FURNACE is a village about 8 miles south from Inveraray, on the western bank of Loch Fyne; here are granite quarries.

IONA is a small island and quoad sacra parish, 3 miles long by 1 broad, off the western extremity of the Ross of Mull, across a sound about a mile in width, traversed by a ferry, and it is 9 miles south-west of Staffa; it is within the parish of Kilfinichen and Kilvickeon, and is known also as Icolmkill or Icolumb-Kill, but was anciently called Hy, or I. and the seat of the first Celtic University in Scotland, founded by St. Columba on the occasion of his mission from Ireland in 563; it now possesses Established, Episcopal and United Free churches, the remains of an ancient cathedral church and the reputed graves of the kings, and is much visited by tourists.

PORT-NA-CURRACH, "The Bay of the Boat," on the south-west side, derives both its name and importance from a tradition of its having been the landing place of the currach, the hide boat of St. Columba.

Iona belonged to the see of the isles, i.e. the Hebrides or Southern isles (Sudreyar), so called to distinguish them from the northern isles of Orkney and Shetland (Nodreyar); the see is said to have been founded in 1098 by Magnus III. King of Norway, to whom these islands had been ceded by the usurper Donald Bane, brother of King Malcolm II. of Scotland: about 1113 the diocese of the Isle of Man was united to this see, thenceforward called "Sodor and Man," and although the two dioceses were again separated about 1380, the style of the joint see is still maintained by the Bishop of Man; the see of the isles, of which Iona became, in 1507, the chief seat, after having been abolished about 1680, was revived in 1733 in connection with that of Caithness, and is now held with Argyll. The island was at a very early period venerated as a place of sanctity and learning, and had already been Christianised for over a century when St. Columba landed here, 12 May, A.D. 563. The monastic settlement established by him on this spot for the training of itinerant missionaries continued to maintain an independent ecclesiastical status until 716, when the monks, with their abbot, Adamnan, agreed to accept the usages of Rome: from 794 the island was ravaged again and again by the Norse invaders, and many of the monks mercilessly slain: in 818 the monastery was rebuilt by Abbot Diarmid, and the shrine containing the relics of St. Columba placed within the church, and towards the close of the 12th century it was again rebuilt by Abbot Reginald, who was also bishop of the Isles, and refounded the abbey as a house of the Cluniac order, and it thus became connected with the Cluniac abbey of Paisley. Simon of Orkney, bishop of the Isles 1229-43, was also abbot of Iona, and at the close of the 15th century the abbey was formally annexed to the see. In pursuance of an Act passed in 1563, the monastery was suppressed and vacated: the cathedral church, being disused, was allowed to fall into decay, and nothing now remains of either woodwork or fittings: as at present existing it consists of a long choir, with clerestory, a south aisle of three bays, and a sacristy on the north side, transepts, an aisleless nave, and a central tower of two stages, 75 feet high, with plain corbelled parapet; the nave and choir are each 62 feet in length and 22 feet wide, measured internally; the internal width, through the transepts, is 69 feet, and the total length, externally, 160 feet, the axis of the church and adjacent buildings being directly south-east and north-west: the monastery adjoins on the north, and the cloisters, immediately abutting on the nave, are 72 feet from north to south, by 66 from east to west, and have alleys 11 feet wide: the east side is formed in part by the north transept of the church, the chapter-house with its vestibule, and two other chambers; on the north side was the refectory, with the stairs thereto, but the west side seems to have been inclosed by a wall only; other portions of the domestic buildings extended northwards, and detached from these, and lying east and west, was a rectangular structure, 60 by 37 feet, the purpose of which is only conjectural. The church has been rebuilt at various periods of red granite with dressings of grey sandstone, and from the method of its construction it is difficult to fix exactly the date of different portions, but there is no doubt that the earliest parts of the existing fabric are to be found in the transepts, including the tower piers, and the north walls of the nave and choir; these are Late Transitional of the latter part of the 12th or the beginning of the 13th century, the remainder, including the sacristy and the tower, which in plan is almost an oblong, was rebuilt during the Late Decorated period, 1315-60, and still later the south aisle of the choir, the pent roof of which is singularly carried on a species of flying buttresses rising from the floor, and supporting masses of masonry reaching up to the line of the clerestory; this aisle retains sedilia and a piscina, and the site of an altar and the caps of the piers are carved with various scriptural subjects; a fine bold doorway, with trefoiled head, leads into the sacristy, and built into the wall above, at a height of 6½ feet from the floor, are two pointed Transitional arches, enriched with dog-tooth carving, and resting in the centre on a circular pier with foliated cap: the choir has also sedilia and piscina, but the high altar of marble, entire in the 17th century, has wholly disappeared. In the centre of the floor, below the first step from the east, is a great slab once containing a brass to a knight of the Macleod family; north of this is the effigy in stone of Abbot Lachlan Mackinnon, d. 1500, and on the south that of Abbot Kenneth Mackenzie, d. 1489, besides which there are other tomb slabs, both in the choir and north transept, and some of these are adorned with Celtic ornament: the splayed east windows of the north transept are recessed under arches, and between these is another arch, with traces of an altar; three sides of the tower are lighted by square openings filled with varied tracery, and the fourth or north side by a two-light pointed window; the east and other windows contain Decorated tracery of graceful flowing character; about 1603 the nave and south aisle were walled off, and the remainder of the church fitted for Divine service, and it continued to be so used until the beginning of the 18th century: in 1902 the church was roofed in, and further repairs were carried out in 1903 and 1911. Divine services are now held throughout the year. Of the monastic buildings, the oldest portion is the chapter-house, which is Transitional, and coeval with the earliest part of the church; it is entered through two circular arches resting on a central pillar, the ornamental work being very similar to that of the two walled-up arches in the choir; within the chapter-house, on either side, are four arched recesses, with sedilia, and it has a small east window; the refectory is Early English, and the rest of the buildings, so far as can be ascertained, belong to the Decorated period; north-east of the chapter-house, and standing obliquely to it, is a small detached chantry chapel of the 15th century, 38 by 21 feet, with three windows and a doorway on the north side; in the cemetery, and 100 yards south-west of the cathedral, stands the roofless chapel of St. Oran, a structure of red granite, 60 by 22 feet, and now the most ancient fabric remaining on the island: it has a western doorway and small loop windows, and has lately been repaired. In this cemetery have been buried, it is affirmed, 48 kings of Scotland, 8 kings of the Sudreyar or Southern Isles, some Norse-Irish monarchs, and one king of France, besides several of the priors of Iona and a number of members of the clan MacLean: there are still two rows of carved and incised slabs and tombstones, which are inclosed within iron railings: it is also said that the island had at one time as many as 160 crosses, of which 60 were taken up and cast into the sea by Archibald, 4th Earl of Argyll, on his embracing the doctrines of the Reformation, and but four now remain, viz.: St. John's, Maclean's, St. Martin's and John McFingon's; the only complete one is that of St. Martin of Tours, standing within the inclosure by the west end of the church, where are the graves of St. Columba and his servant Diarmid; it is 15 feet high, on a brass of three steps, and is elaborately carved with interlaced work and bosses; Maclean's cross is 11 feet in height, and richly sculptured, and McFingon's bears the name of one of the abbots of Iona, d. 1439, and the galley device of the Norse kings of Man. The island is the property of the Duke of Argyll. The 8th Duke, about 1880, cleared the site of the cathedral and adjacent buildings, and effected various repairs and replacements at considerable cost: the carved fragments then found were carefully collected, and are now in the chapter-house. The population in 1911 was 526.

ISLAY, the most southerly of the Hebrides, is a large, irregularly-shaped island about 25 miles from north to south, by 18 broad, and is divided into 3 parishes, Kilchoman, Kilarrow and Kilmeny and Kildalton; it is divided from the island of Jura by the sound of Islay; two salt lochs, Loch Indaal on the south and Loch Ghruinnard on the north, run some distance into the island, almost cutting off its westerly portion, and in boisterous weather many vessels seek the former for shelter; its chief villages and ports are Bowmore and Bridgend, on Loch Indaal; Port-Ellen on a bay to the south; Port-Askaig on the north; Portnahaven on the south-west point of the entrance to Loch Indaal, and Port-Charlotte, halfway up the west shore of this loch, and at Bruichladdich, near the head of Loch Indaal, is a pier for steamers. There are two fresh water lochs, Loch Gorm in the western limb of the island, and Loch Finlaggan to the north, both containing islands on which are remains of the fortified houses of the Macdonald chieftains. Finlaggan was the principal stronghold, and here the chiefs were installed with great ceremony on a stone still preserved on the islet, which also has remains of a chapel, and in the burial ground some ancient slabs. The mountains on the island attain a considerable altitude; Ben Bheigen reaches a height of 1,609 feet, Ben Bhan 1,544 feet, Sgarb Breac 1,192 feet, and Ben Tartabhaile 758 feet, and these are the resort of eagles, falcons and other birds; great numbers of seals are also to be found along the coast. The shore is very rugged, but in some parts has fine flat beaches and sandy bays, and the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and besides Lochs Gorm and Finlaggan there is Loch Skerrols, and numerous smaller lakes, well stocked with trout; there are also two rivers, the Sorn and the Laggan; the former empties itself into Loch Indaal, and the latter, a fine salmon stream, into Laggan Bay. Before Islay became the seat of government of the Lords of the Isles, it appears to have been under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, as there are many duns and castles, evidently of Danish origin, besides many places which have Danish names. The land is tolerably cultivated, and upwards of 3,000 head of cattle and several hundred horses of the Clydesdale breed are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in the island. There is a regular daily communication by steamer from Port-Ellen and Port-Askaig with Glasgow and West Tarbert on the mainland, and there are lighthouses at Rudha Mhail, the extreme northern point of the island, at McArthur's head on the east, and at Rhinns point on the south-west. Perhaps the most remarkable natural curiosity on the island is Slochd-Mhaol Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about 4 miles from Port-Ellen and 9 from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush by two naturally arched channels and dash up through an aperture in the dome-shaped roof. Near Loch Ghruinnard is the site of a great battle fought in 1598 between the Macdonalds and Macleans, and at Benbigger the Macdonalds were almost destroyed by a combination of the Macleans and MacLeods, Camerons and McNeils, by instructions of James VI.

OA is a quoad sacra parish, formed out of Kildalton, and has an Established church and a school: the population in 1911 was 177, and that of KILMENY, a similar parish, formed out of Kilarrow, 787.

BOWMORE, in Kilarrow parish, is the principal place on the island. It was founded in 1768, and is situated on the east side of Loch Indaal, 3 miles south of Islay House, 11 south-south-west from Port-Askaig, and the same from Port-Ellen and Port-Charlotte. The village, which consists of two principal streets and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a quay. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The parish church is a circular edifice, with a peculiarly formed spire; there is also a United Free church and a Baptist chapel. The Scotch Episcopal Mission Church of the Good Shepherd will seat 80 persons. The Public Hall is a large building, with sittings for over 500 persons, and the Public Library contains about 1,800 volumes, and also includes an assembly room. The Islay Infectious Diseases Hospital, situated on the Bridgend road, about a mile from the town, was erected in 1904 at a cost of £1,100; it contains 7 beds, and rooms for the matron and nurse. There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland. A sheriff's court is held here once a year. The distillery here is worked by the Bowmore Distillery Co. The Bowmore and the Seaview hotels are the principal inns, and there are several comfortable temperance hotels and private houses which cater for tourists. The population in 1911 was 805.

BRIDGEND, in Kilarrow parish, is a village 3 miles north of Bowmore and 8 south of Port-Askaig, and has a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A court is held for the trial of petty offences, and a sheriff's court once yearly. Islay House, the seat of Hugh Morrison esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. is situated at the head of Loch Indaal, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country, and has fine gardens and attached grounds. Of the ancient church of St. Maelrubha there are now no remains, but several broken slabs lie in the churchyard, and on an eminence here, called the "Battery," is the carved stem of a cross To the north-west, near Loch Ghruinnard, are the remains of a chapel, 30 feet in length, with two round-headed windows.

About 5 miles from Bridgend, on the road to Port-Askaig, is the village of BALLYGRANT, where there is a lead mine, which when working gives employment to a number of hands. The lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

BRUICHLADDICH is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, 8 miles from Bowmore, on the road to Port-Charlotte. Here is a sub-branch of the National Bank of Scotland, which is opened on Tuesdays only, a large distillery, a temperance hotel, and post office; at the quay vessels of considerable burden can unload in fine weather.

PORT-ASKAIG is a small creek or harbour on the north-east side of the island, opposite Feoline, in Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad. The port is 11 miles north-east of Bowmore, and has a quay where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water. Here lobsters are found in abundance. Between Port-Askaig and Bowmore is a burial ground retaining fragments of a chapel and the base of a cross, and at Keills, near the port, are traces of the chapel of St. Columba, with the shaft of a cross, 6 feet in height, and several carved slabs.

PORT-CHARLOTTE is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, on the west side of Loch Indaal, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles south-west of Port-Askaig, and contains a Parish, Free and United Free churches, a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school. This portion of the island forms a peninsula, and on the western part called "the Rhinns" stood the ancient church of Kilchoman, of which no trace exists, but in the attached cemetery are several crosses, one of which is 8½ feet in height, finely carved with foliage, figures of angels, a crucifix, and bearing an inscription. At Kilchieran, about 2 miles south, is a much ruined chapel, retaining a piscina and aumbry and part of a font. At Nerabols, on the east side of the peninsula, is a burial ground with traces of a chapel, and a broken cross carved with the figure of a bishop, and another with a mutilated carving of the Crucifixion. Population in 1911, 508.

PORTNAHAVEN is a small village and seaport and quoad sacra parish formed out of Kilchoman; it is 24 miles south-west of Port-Askaig, and 16 south-west of Bridgend. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a pier erected by the County Council; and on Rhinns Point, near the port, is a lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here are Established, United Free and Free churches and a public school. Off Portnahaven lies the small island of Oransay, on which are remains of a chapel 48 feet in length. Neave island, west of the entrance to Loch Ghruinnard, also has remains of a chapel about 22 feet long. A considerable business is done in the season, the shores on this part of the island abounding with fish. Population in 1911, 628.

PORT-ELLEN is a seaport and village in the parish of Kildalton, on the east side of the island, 11 miles south-east of Bowmore and 22 south of Port-Askaig. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide. The quay, formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour, was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1832 and 1881, and considerably extended in 1891. Here are an Established church, Free church, United Free church, a Baptist chapel and a school. In 1902 a large public hall was erected by Iain Ramsay esq. J.P. of Kildalton. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established here, and there are two inns. In 1863 the late John Ramsay esq. M.P., J.P. of Kildalton, became proprietor of that parish (which includes the quoad sacra parish of Oa). The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing. At Kildalton, about 9 miles north of Port-Ellen, are the remains of a church of the Early Pointed period, about 60 feet long, with very narrow lancet windows and a canopied piscina, and built into one of the windows a mailed effigy holding a sword, and having on the right a decayed inscription, and on the left a small figure in a niche; in the burial ground stands a fine cross nearly 10 feet high, with expanded arms, traversed by a circle, and ornamented with bosses, grotesque figures and interlaced work, and in a panel on the east face is a group of the Virgin and Child: outside is another and later cross, 7 feet high. At Kilnaughton, about 2 miles west, are the remains of another church, 33 feet long within, but much dilapidated, and in the burial ground lie several sculptured slabs. Off Port-Ellen, and distant about 3 miles, is the island of Texa, on which are the remains of a small chapel, several carved slabs, and part of the shaft of a cross, with carvings of a galley, a stag hunt, and a figure bearing a sword and spear. There are some good golf links here; those at Machrie, where there is a comfortable hotel, being among the finest in the kingdom. Population of Port-Ellen Parish Ward in 1911, 871.

About 4 miles east from Port-Ellen are the villages of LAGAVULIN and ARDBEG. At the latter place are schools, and also one of the largest distilleries in the island; there is also a commodious harbour, with a quay, at which vessels of 12 feet draught of water can lie and discharge at ebb tide.

The fairs held in the island of Islay are as follows:—For cattle, Bridgend, last Wednesday in April. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday, if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; November, for horses, Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after. At Bridgend, for cattle, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Bridgend, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May, last Wednesday of June, July and September, and at Port-Ellen the previous day. The area of the parish of Kilarrow and Kilmeny comprises 65,956 acres; rateable value, £14,505; the population in 1911 was 2,552, including 15 inmates and officials in Islay Combination Poorhouse, and of Kilarrow ecclesiastical parish, 1,765, and of Kilmeny, 787. The area of the parish of Kilchoman comprises 37,428 acres; rateable value, £10,423; the population in 1911 was 2,087, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,459. The area of the parish of Kildalton comprises 47,201 acres; rateable value, £10,561; population in 1911, 1,648, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,471.

JURA is an island about 30 miles long, lying off the west coast of the mainland, from which it is separated by the Sound of Jura, and from Islay by the Sound of that name; it is a civil and ecclesiastical parish, the head of a poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Bowmore. The island has a chain of mountains running down its centre, the most prominent of which are "The Three Paps," mountains rising to an elevation of 2,615 feet above the sea-level and forming part of the same ridge, but having two valleys separating them: the southernmost is called "Beina a' Chaolais" (the Mountain of the Sound), the next and highest "Beinn an Oir" (The Mountain of Gold), and the third "Benshianta" (the Consecrated Mountain). There are actually five of these conical peaks, but only three of them are distinguished as "The Paps." Corrabheinn (the steep peak) is the most precipitous, but is lowest of the cluster. The other hills range from 1,200 to 1,500 feet, and afford a shelter to the east side of the island, where nearly all the cultivation is carried on and where most of the inhabitants reside, the west side being wild and desolate, except where Loch Tarbert penetrates far into the interior. There is a good road along the eastern side, from Ardlussa to Feolin on the Sound of Islay, where there is a ferry to that island. At the northern end are several large caves, and off the northern extremity, between this island and that of Scarba, is the whirlpool of Corrievreckan, formed by the Atlantic tide running into a small inlet. The parish includes the islands of Belnahua, Fladda, Garvelloch, Lunga, Scarba and Skervuile, on which last is a lighthouse. Jura belongs partly to Colin Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. who resides at Jura House, and partly to the North Jura Company Ltd. which owns all the portion of the island from Knockrome northward. It is the most rugged of the Hebrides, being composed chiefly of huge rocks piled one on another in the utmost disorder. The west side of the island is wild, intersected by numerous torrents, which come rushing down from the mountains. There are some good fresh water lochs, the largest, Knockbreag, being 1 mile long.

MILLTOWN, now called Craighouse, the principal village in Jura, is 8 miles from Port-Askaig ferry, north-east of Islay. It has a good quay, and a large harbour, which being formed by several small islands, has obtained the appellation of Small Isles Harbour: a wharf extends about 400 feet in length, and most steamers can now come alongside at any state of the tide. About half a mile north of the village is the church of the parish of Jura; but the ancient church stood at Kilkerndale, near the village of Kiels. There is also a United Free Church. The village contains a distillery, which is not working at present (1921).

GARVELLOCH, or Holy Island, contains an extensive old fort, called Dunconnel, once a stronghold belonging to the Lords of the Isles. On the Nun's Island are considerable remains of a nunnery, said to have been founded by St. Columba, and including the remains of a chapel, about 22 feet long, but without gables, having a single rectangular window at the east end splayed on both sides, and traces of an altar: the other buildings comprise several cells, with dome-like roofs: to the south is a burial ground, and at the head of a narrow creek a spring called St. Columba's well: on an eminence near is an altar-like tomb, reputed to be that of Eithne, mother of St. Columba.

SCARBA, a lofty but very rough island, has on its eastern side a burial ground and some remains of a chapel, 25 feet long internally.

LAGG is a small village on the east coast. The red deer abounds in the uplands of this island. At Tarbert are the foundations of a chapel, 32 feet long, a rude shaft, incised with a cross, and a monolith, 8 feet in height. At Ardlussa, on the north-east, are also remains of a chapel, within a cemetery. The area of the parish is 93,794 acres; rateable value, £3,794. The population in 1911 was 570, including 32 persons on Balnahua, 3 on Lunga Island, 15 on Scarba Island, 9 on Fladda Island, 2 on Garbheileach Island and 2 on Skervuile Island.

KILBRANDON and KILCHATTAN form a joint parish, in Lorne poor combination, consisting mostly of the islands of Seil, Easdale, Luing, Shuna, Torsay, and Ardmaddy, Degnish and Kilchoan on the mainland. The island of Seil is connected to the mainland by a bridge called Clachau bridge. The parish is divided from Mull on the west by the Firth of Lorne, and from Jura on the south by the Gulf of Corrievreckan, in which there is a whirlpool; its mainland portion is bounded north by the parish of Kilninver. The trade is mostly connected with the slate quarries at Luing. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle over a century ago. Lead mines have been worked in the islands of Luing and Seil; and there are several caves in Kilbride well worth visiting. Ardmaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, on the mainland, about 2 miles east of Easdale, stands on a fine and pleasant bay; the grounds are well wooded and contain several pretty cascades; it is now (1921) occupied by Sydney Buxton esq. The area of the parish is 13,384 acres; rateable value, £4,544; population in 1911, 1,370.

EASDALE is a village in this parish, partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seil, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; it is 16 miles south-west-by-south of Oban, 30 north-north-west of Lochgilphead, 40 west of Inveraray, and 142 west of Edinburgh, and is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of the Marquess of Breadalbane, but at present (1921) are not being worked. Several of the quarries are above 250 feet below the sea, and are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welsh rock; and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed on this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steamboats pass almost daily to and from the north. A pier was erected in 1873, at which steamers call regularly. There is good quay accommodation. Cuan slate quarries adjoin the above, and yield slate of a blue colour, and here also is a quay at which vessels are loaded in any state of weather or tide. Population of Easdale Island in 1911, 216.

LUING is a pleasant and fertile island, about 6 miles long and 1½ broad, and in the ecclesiastical parish of Kilbrandon. At the head of Kilchattan bay, on the east side, are the remains of the ancient church of St. Blane: the north, south and west walls are standing, and on the north side is a mutilated doorway and window: the burial ground contains no ancient memorials, but one to Alexander Campbell of Achadnadure, d. 14 Nov. 1829, aged 78, with a singular admonition. Population in 1911, 540.

At TOBERONOCHY (in Luing) slate quarries were opened about 1883, but are not being worked at present (1921); lessees, the Toberonochy Slate Quarries Company, Mr. Donald MacVicar, managing director. There is good quay accommodation, and vessels can be loaded at almost any state of the tide. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. is the principal landowner.

BELNAHUA, or Balnahua, a small island to the north of Scarba, contains several quarries of excellent blue slate, at present (1921) unworked. Population in 1911, 32; 1921, uninhabited.

SHUNA is a small island lying off the coast of Nether Lorn, in Kilbrandon parish, situated 14 miles south-south-west of Oban. FLADDA and TORSAY are also small islands in the above parish. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. and John Fletcher are the principal landowners. Population of Shuna island in 1911, 6, of Fladda (on which is a lighthouse), 9 and of Torsay, 5.

SEIL is a small island also in the parish of Kilbrandon, and contains a fragment of the ancient church of St. Brandon, and in the burial ground are several slabs carved with swords and foliage. The population of Seil island in 1911 was 559.

KILBRIDE, see KILFINAN.

KILCALMONELL is a parish lying on the shore of West Tarbert Loch, bounded on the north and north-east by South Knapdale, east by Saddell, south by Killean, and west by the Sound of Jura. From West Tarbert, at the head of the loch, two roads start, following the shores of the loch, the northern winding through a fine well-wooded country, leading to Ardpatrick and Kilberry, and the southern to Campbeltown. At Ardpatrick (now in the parish of South Knapdale) is a ferry to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardpatrick a road branches to the west; and at a distance of 4 miles Carse is passed; 5 miles further is Drimdrissaig, the property of James Lithgow. West Tarbeck Loch is about 9 miles in length, but very shallow at the upper end, and the Islay steamer pier is a few miles down. A road, running by the edge of the loch, past the landing stage of the Islay steamer, has been found a great convenience by passengers going to or returning from Islay. The Royal Mail coach passes daily, both going to East Tarbert and returning to Campbeltown. Near the sixth milestone is the village of Whitehouse, containing a board school. The parish church is in the village of Clachan, which see. Col. Colin G. P. Campbell J.P. Mrs. Margaret B. McKinnon, Miss Gladys M. McKinnon and John R. Moreton-Macdonald esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area is 28,403 acres; rateable value, £9,960; the population in 1911 was 1,712 in the civil and 815 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KILLARROW and KILMENY PARISH, see ISLAY.

KILLEAN and KILKENZIE form a joint parish on the west side of Kintyre, Killean, the kirktown, on the coast, being 17 miles north-west of Campbeltown. The parish extends 16 miles from north to south by 5 wide, and is bounded north by Kilcalmonell and east by Saddell. Killean village is about a mile from Tayinloan. Here are the ruins of a Gothic pre-Reformation church, the old parish kirk, and around it is the graveyard, still in use and containing many very old stones. Two miles further south, at Cleit Point, stands the present parish church, erected in 1787 and close besides it stands Killean public school. About a quarter of a mile further south, on an eminence, stands Killean United Free church, erected in 1846, with manse adjoining. Seals are very often seen lying on the rocks near the coast.

BALLACHANTUIE is a village in this parish, on the coast, about 10 miles north-west of Campbeltown: it contains a small church, erected in 1825, and a board school. The road between this village and Campbeltown has been much improved, and another road several miles in length has been cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

GLENBARR is a village nearly 4 miles south of Killean, situate on the banks of the Barr water, which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout.

KILKENZIE is a hamlet in the extreme south of the parish, 5 miles from Campbeltown.

TAYINLOAN is a small village in this parish, about 19 miles north from Campbeltown.

MUASDALE, a village about 15 miles north of Campbeltown, had once a starch mill, of which now only the chimney stack stands. The people are now employed in lobster fishing and agriculture. It possesses a reading room and a Coats' library.

The Duke of Argyll D.L. Alexander Fleming esq. Major Charles B. Macalister J.P. William Kennedy esq. J.P. John Ronald Moreton-Macdonald esq. D.L., J.P. Mrs. Macneal, James McAlister Hall esq. and the trustees of Robert Colvill esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 42,138 acres; rateable value, £10,428; population (1911), 1,019.

LISMORE and APPIN constitute a united parish, formed of the island of Lismore and the district of Appin on the mainland and on the east shore of Loch Linnhe. The island lies at the mouth of Loch Linnhe, and is about 9¾ miles long by 2 broad; its name in Gaelic signifies "the great garden," and it is still very fertile, though abounding in small hills. The parish, besides the island and the mainland district, includes the smaller islands of Musdale, Sheep and Shuna. At the Clachan of Lismore, about 3 miles from the northern point of the island, is the church of St. Moluac, constituted the cathedral church of the see of Argyll on its formation, c. 1200: it consists simply of the choir of an apparently never-completed structure, and forms an aisleless oblong, in the Decorated Flamboyant style, 60 feet in length by 30 wide and internally 52 feet in height; in 1749 it was new-roofed, and retains three sedilia with round-headed arches and a plain piscina with a pointed recess, with a trefoil-headed niche behind it, and on the north side an acutely pointed doorway leading to the sacristy: in 1898 the church was entirely renovated: in the attached burial ground are some carved slabs: there is also a United Free church. The palace or castle of the bishops stood about 4 miles south-by-west from the cathedral, and there are some remains of the buildings and also remains of two Danish or Scandinavian forts, called Cœffin and Tirfuir. There is a small village at Port Ramsay, and at the southern point of the island on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel stands a lighthouse of stone, in almost a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light is catoptric. A pier has been erected at Achnacroish, on the east side of the island, at which the mail steamer calls daily and twice on Wednesday and Friday during the tourist season. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from the island. The principal industries are farming and fishing. There are three fresh-water lakes, in which there is a good supply of trout &c. The Duke of Argyll, the trustees of the late Rev. James Fell and the trustees of the late Donald Campbell are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish is 92,656 acres; rateable value, £34,624. The population in 1911 was 3,886, of whom 407 were on the island of Lismore and 3 on Shuna island, Sheep island being unoccupied. The ecclesiastical parish of Lismore had a population of 407 in 1911.

LOCH AWE is a small village at the head of the loch of the same name, with a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway, 22 miles east from Oban, and within the civil parish of Ardchattan and Muckairn; it has a pier from which steamers sail to Portnachan. St. Conan's Established Mission church was built in 1882 by Walter J. D. Campbell esq. of Blythward. The loch, which is 24 miles long, and one of the most beautiful as well as one of the finest fishing lochs in Scotland, abounding in trout, is surrounded on the north by huge mountains, of which the highest is Ben Cruachan, 3,689 feet. Its banks are well wooded and numerous islands are dotted here and there; on Inishail, one of these, at the north end of the loch, there was formerly a convent of Cistercian nuns; the existing remains, internally 51 feet in length, seem to indicate a building of the First Pointed or Lancet period: in the surrounding burial ground are several carved slabs, and a prostrate cross, measuring 6 feet in length. On a promontory at the head of the loch stand the ruins of Kilchurn Castle. The most convenient hotel for the angler is the Loch Awe.

LOCHGAIR, see GLASSARY.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a police burgh in the parish of Glassary, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district, and also a quoad sacra parish taken from the parishes of Glassary and South Knapdale; it is nearly 2 miles north of Ardrishaig and 24 south-west of Inveraray by road, and takes its name from its position at the head of Loch Gilp, which is a small inlet of Loch Fyne, 12 miles north of Tarbert, and is 3½ miles long by 1 mile broad at the widest part, with Ardrishaig and the entrance to the Crinan canal near its mouth. The burgh consists of several well-paved streets, and is supplied with water from a reservoir belonging to the commissioners: the streets are lighted with gas supplied by a company. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 25 and 26 Victoria, cap. 101, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates. Meetings of the Argyll Police and Board of Control are held periodically; meetings of the Mid-Argyll district committee of the County Council, monthly; here also are the county offices, including the head quarters of the constabulary. In front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a site provided for the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and lines of telegraph and telephone also connect it with Campbeltown, Inveraray, Oban, the Islands of Mull and Islay &c. and Glasgow. The Established church, erected at the head of Argyll street in 1827-8, and rebuilt in 1885, at a cost of £2,500, is of native stone, with freestone facings, in the Early Gothic style. There are United Free, Free and Presbyterian churches and Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels; the Episcopal church, called Christ Church, on the north side of the town, was erected in 1852, and is a building in the Decorated Gothic style, consisting of nave and chancel, and has a stained east window: there are 180 sittings; the living, value £218, is at present (1921) vacant. The Argyll and Bute District Mental Hospital is available for 490 persons. An Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected in 1898, and near it is the Combination Poorhouse. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Auchendarroch, the residence of Alastair M. Campbell esq. J.P. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory, the seat of Sir Arthur John Campbell-Orde bart. D.L., J.P. surrounded with well-wooded grounds, forming a conspicuous feature from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March for horses, on the Wednesday fortnight after the last Wednesday in May, on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses. The area of the burgh is 103 acres; rateable value, burgh, £4,939; landward, £12,205: the population in 1911 was—burgh, 921 (not including 36 inmates and 6 officials in Lochgilphead Combination Poorhouse and 439 inmates and 148 officials and their families in Argyll and Bute District Mental Hospital). ecclesiastical parish, 1,855.

LOCHGOILHEAD and KILMORICH form a joint parish, lying west of Loch Long, and east of the upper part of Loch Fyne, and in the small debt court district of Dunoon; the parish is 16 miles in length from north to south, by 9 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by Dunoon parish, east by Dumbartonshire and west by Strachur, and contains the villages of Lochgoilhead, Kilmorich, Cairndow and Carrick. Lochgoilhead village is situated at the head of Loch Goil, 14 miles north of Dunoon, and 11 south by east of Inveraray, and has Established and United Free churches and an hotel; here also is a pier for steamers from Glasgow. The country on both sides of the loch is mountainous, and Ben Lochain, a little to the west, reaches a height of 2,306 feet. Loch Goil is about 6 miles long. Cairndow is a small village at the head of Loch Fyne, 10 miles north-east of Inveraray and 9 miles north of Lochgoilhead, and has an Established church. Carrick is a village about 6 miles south of Lochgoilhead, on the west shore of Loch Goil, and has a pier. On a rock on the shore near the village are the ruins of Carrick Castle, a strong square tower, erected in the 14th century. It seems at one time to have been surrounded by the sea, and connected by means of a drawbridge with the mainland. A little south of Cairndow are the policies and old house of Ardkinglas; close by a new mansion was erected in 1907 by Capt. Sir Andrew Noble bart. K.C.B. The area is 69,711 acres; rateable value, £6,759; population in 1911 was 782.

MORVERN is a parish lying on the mainland north of the Sound of Mull, its kirktown being at the north-west opening of the sound, 5 miles south-east from Tobermory and about 23 north-west from Oban; it is in the poor combination of Mull; it gives its name to one of the sub-divisions of the county, but the most important village is Lochaline, about 8 miles to the south-east. The parish is bounded on the south and south-west by the Sound of Mull, south-east by the Sound of Lismore and Loch Linnhe, and north and north-west by Loch Sunart, and extends 20 miles from east to west by 12 in breadth; the country is mountainous, Ben Iadain rising 2,423 feet above sea level, and is principally occupied in grazing farms. The parish church at Kiel, about a quarter of a mile from the village of Lochaline, and traditionally founded by St. Columba, was rebuilt of local stone and red freestone in 1898: the manse is at Fiunary, 4 miles north-west. The United Free church at Lochaline is a building of local stone with freestone dressings, and close to it is the manse, which commands a fine view of the Sound. The Roman Catholic chapel at Drimnin, opposite Tobermory, is served from Oban. Near Lochaline are the ruins of Ardtornish Castle, anciently one of the residences of the Lords of the Isles: and here in 1461, the then Lord, with his Council, met the envoys of Edward IV. of England and entered into an alliance. Near Morvern kirktown are the remains of Killundine Castle, and of Kinlochaline Castle, which is 3 miles from Lochaline. At Achabeg, 3 miles from Lochaline, is a stone circle designated in Celtic "The Stones of Sacrifice," and at Rahoy, near Loch Sunart, is a vitrified fort, as yet unexplored. The Glencripesdale estate in this parish consists of 27,000 acres and is the property of the Messrs. Newton: on the estate are many houses. The area of the parish, which includes the island of Carna, is 90,736 acres; rateable value, £6,603; the population in 1911 was 694 in the civil parish (including 14 on Carna Island) and 635 in the ecclesiastical parish.

MUCKAIRN, see ARDCHATTAN AND MUCKAIRN.

MULL is a large island lying south of Morvern, from which it is separated by the Sound of Mull, and contains the town of Tobermory and the villages of Bunessan and Salen, which are given under separate headings; it comprises the greater part of the parishes of Kilfinichen and Kilvicuen, and Kilninian and Kilmore, and the whole of Pennygowan and Torosay; in extent it is about 27 miles from south-east to north-west, and 20 broad at its widest part; the poor combination takes its name from the island, and the small debt court district is that of Tobermory, the chief town; the two northern parishes are mountainous, the principal hills being Ben More, 3,172 feet above sea level, and Dun-da-gu, 2,505, both in Torosay parish; the western coast is much indented by bays and lochs, two of which, Loch Scridain and Loch-Na-Keal, run 7 or 8 miles into the island, and on the south-east, Loch Spelve, which is almost land locked, is about the same length. There are many fresh water lochs, of which the largest, Loch Frisa, 4 miles long, contains salmon and sea trout and out of it flows the river Aros. Loch Buie, a salt water inlet on the south of the island, is now a fishing station; there are also several small rivers. The island contains many remains of ancient castles &c. among which are those of Duart, which has been restored and is the residence of Sir Fitzroy D. Maclean bart. K.C.B. once the stronghold of the chiefs of the MacLeans, occupying the brink of a high cliff which shoots out from the coast of Mull into the sound, opposite Oban, and Aros Castle, the stronghold of the Lords of the Isles, and now the property of W. W. Campbell esq. From this part of the Sound of Mull is seen the lofty Ben More, 3,172 feet, and the ridge of Ben Tallach, 2,800 feet. There are also a number of smaller forts round the coast, probably erected as a protection against the Norwegians. On the western side, close to the Ross of Mull, is still worked a quarry of red granite, or porphyry.

The parish of Kilfinichen and Kilvicuen occupies the south-western portion of the island on each side of Loch Scridain, and includes the islands of Dhuheartach (on which is a lighthouse), Earrait, Inch Kenneth, Iona (for which see separate heading) and part of Mull: it also contains the village of Bunessan. At Kilvicuen are the remains of a chapel rudely built, and retaining only the side walls; but there is a slab with the effigy of a priest within a trefoil-headed niche, and having on one side a chalice, and on the other a much worn inscription. The small island of Inch Kenneth, at the mouth of Loch-Na-Keal, was, in 1773, visited by Dr. Johnson, and still retains the remains of a church of the First Pointed period, about 41 feet long and 20 feet wide, with a ruined sacristy on the south-east: the windows are lancets, deeply splayed: there is a piscina, and a number of sculptured slabs, including one with a male effigy in helmet and short tunic, and bearing on the left arm a target, and holding in the right hand a ball; the figure carries a sword and dagger, and at the feet is a dog. At Pennycross, at the mouth of Loch Buie, is a plain cross on five steps, and 4 feet 3 inches in height. The area comprises 60,937 acres; rateable value, £4,994; the population in 1911 was 1,403, of whom 1,142 were on Mull, 30 on Earrait, 222 on Iona and 3 on Dhuheartach Islands (on the last named is a lighthouse). Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 877.

KILNINIAN and KILMORE parish forms the northern section of the island, north of Loch-Na-Keal, which nearly cuts it off from the other parts of the island, the distance between the head of the loch and the Bay of Aros being only about 4 miles; it includes the islands of Calve, Gometra, Little Colonsay and Ulva, and contains the town of Tobermory. At Kilninian, which is finely situated on Loch Tua, the parish church, built in 1754, occupies the site of the ancient fabric, of which no traces now remain; in the burial ground are a number of richly carved slabs and the shaft of a cross, and hard by is St. Ninian's well, a fount of pellucid water. At Aros is Glenforsa, the seat of Lieut.-Col. Charles Greenhill-Gardyne D.L., J.P. At Treshinish, on Calgary bay, is the old burying place of Kilmaluag, in which stands a plain cross, 3 feet in height, and at Kilmore are some remains of a chapel, with a burial ground, containing a sculptured slab. The area comprises 74,267 acres; rateable value, £11,240; population in 1911, 1,935, including 1,830 on Mull (of which 65 was shipping), 988 in Tobermory police burgh (62 being shipping), 44 on Gometra, 56 on Ulva, 1 on Calve and 4 on Little Colonsay islands. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 562.

PENNYGOWAN and TOROSAY parish is the largest in the island, and occupies the south-eastern portion to the south of Loch-Na-Keal. At Pennygowan are the remains of an ancient chapel, 39 feet 9 inches long within, the walls of which are standing, but the gables have fallen; there are three narrow windows with slightly carved heads, and a doorway on the north-west, and inside is the lower portion of a tapering shaft, carved in bold relief with the Virgin and Child, and spreading foliage: in the burial ground are several slabs with effigies. At Laggan, near the head of Loch Buie, is a chapel 35 feet long, with walls and gables entire, and narrow lancet or round-headed windows and doorway, and the octagonal basin of a font. Duart Castle, which belonged to the chiefs of the MacLeans, is 4½ miles from the old ferry house of Auchnacraig, and stands on a promontory, which forms the eastern side of Duart bay, nearly opposite to the southern point of Lismore island; the shell of the building is complete, and forms a parallelogram, 100 feet by 65 feet, the oldest portion being a solid square tower with walls 12 to 14 feet thick, with round headed splayed windows; the other buildings date from 1663, with subsequent additions. The area is 89,584 acres; rateable value, £6,517; population in 1911, 835, all on Mull. The population of the ecclesiastical parish of Torosay in 1911 was 282.

SALEN (which is given under a separate heading) is a village in Kilninian and Torosay parishes, on the south-east angle of the Bay of Aros.

Fairs in Mull: at Salen, a large horse fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday; at Craiganure, Morvern and the islands of Coll and Tiree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salen.

OBAN is a modern town and police burgh and seaport, in the parish of Kilmore and Kilbride, 136 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 117 north-west from Glasgow, 40 south-south-west from Fort William, 32 west-north-west from Inveraray and 80 south-east from Tobermory, with a terminal station on a branch from Stirling of the Caledonian railway, and is a great centre of the steamboat traffic to the Caledonian canal, West Argyllshire and the Western Isles. The town, which is divided by a small river into two sections, is situated at the head of a fine bay, protected by the Island of Kerrera, and having an entrance at each end. This bay is from 12 to 20 fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a good number of merchantmen. There are three quays, which have been enlarged and improved so as to afford ample room to the various vessels frequenting the port, and the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses constructed a pier for lighthouse purposes in 1908. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whisky, wool and sheep dip. The principal streets of the town are lighted with electricity from municipal works erected in 1903. Here are also gas works and a fire engine station. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, six councillors and a town clerk. The Municipal buildings, in Albany street, erected in 1897, at a total cost of £6,600, are of freestone, and contain the offices of the burgh officials. A sheriff's court is held every Friday, a justice of peace court when required, and a police and burgh court every Monday and when required. The Sheriff Court House and Police Station were completed in 1889, in the Classic style, from the designs of the late Mr. D. Macintosh, of Oban. The Court House, the main entrance to which is in Albany street, contains the offices of the county procurator fiscal, the sheriff clerk depute &c. The front is entirely finished with a polished freestone, and the rear of grey granite with freestone dressings. Further along Albany street are the Police buildings, consisting of the police station and the usual offices, the material employed being granite and freestone. The church of the quoad sacra parish of Oban, in Combie street, was erected in 1893, on the site of the old church, at a cost of £3,200, and affords 650 sittings. St. Colomba's Established church, in George street, erected in 1875, is an elegant structure with a spire 120 feet high. In Tweeddale street is a Congregational chapel, rebuilt in 1880, capable of accommodating 500. The Free High church stands on a hill to the east of the town, and has a Mission hall in connection in Stevenson street. The United Free church, in Argyll square, was erected in 1893, at a cost of £4,700. There is another in Dunollie road, a Free Presbyterian church in Campbell street, and Congregational and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist was erected in 1864, at a cost of about £1,700, and consecrated in Sept. 1864 by the Bishop of London, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, with stained windows; it was enlarged in 1887. The chancel, sanctuary, side chapel, one side aisle and one bay of a new church were erected in 1910, on ground adjoining, and affords at present, together with the old portion, about 600 sittings. The rectory, net value £330, has been held since 1895 by the Very Rev. C. Pressley-Smith D.D. of Aberdeen University, who is also a canon of Cumbrae cathedral and dean of Argyll and the Isles. On the Corran esplanade stands the Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral and the residence of the Right Rev. Donald Martin, Roman Catholic Bishop of Argyll and the Isles. To the south of the town a combination poor-house was opened in 1862, for the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn; there are branches of the Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, National Bank of Scotland Limited, North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland in the town. The Burgh school, for secondary education, in Scorba road, was built in 1890 and enlarged in 1896 and again in 1908; the school contains special class rooms for science, cookery and art teaching, and is one of the three Centre schools in Argyllshire. One newspaper, the "Oban Times and Argyllshire Advertiser," is published here weekly. There is a fine sandy beach at Ganavan, about a mile to the north of the town, which can be approached by boat, and by means of the esplanade there is direct access along the sea-shore. Fairs and markets, for cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Tuesday before the fourth Thursday in March, September and November; and for hiring, April and October. The area of the burgh is 891 acres; rateable value, £49,673; the population in 1901 was 5,728, and in 1911, 5,557 in the police and 4,992 in the parliamentary burgh and 4,004 in the ecclesiastical parish. The population of St. Columba ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,681.

KILMORE AND KILBRIDE form a parish on the coast of the Firth of Lorne and south of the mouth of Loch Etive, the kirktown of which is 5 miles south from Oban; the parish includes the burgh of Oban and the island of Kerrera; it is in the Lorn poor combination and small debt court district of Oban, and extends about 10 miles from east to west by 6 north to south; its boundaries are the parishes of Ardchattan on the north, Kilchrenan on the east and Kilninver on the south. At Kilmore is an Established church.

DUNSTAFFNAGE, DUNOLLIE and GYLEN Castles are in the parish. The first-named stands on a promontory, at the southern point of the entrance to Loch Etive; it is believed to have been the residence of the Kings of Scotland until they removed, about 850, to Scone, when Kenneth II. took with him the "Stone of Destiny," or coronation seat, now in Westminster Abbey; the circumference of the castle is about 400 feet. Dunstaffnage Castle is the seat of Angus John Campbell esq. Dunollie Castle stands on a rock on the coast, half a mile north of Oban, and has a fine keep, still in a tolerable state of repair. Gylen Castle stands on the south-east point of the island of Kerrera, and was a stronghold of the MacDougalls of Lorn. King Alexander II. is said to have died on this island, about 1249, when on an expedition against the western isles, and Haco, or Haakon, of Norway, made the island a rendezvous for his galleys. There is a quarry of excellent freestone, about 4 miles south, on the shore of Loch Feochan. The area of the parish comprises 29,503 acres; rateable value, exclusive of Oban, £10,985; the population in 1901 was 6,301, of whom 5,557 were in Oban and 80 on Kerrera island. The population of Kilmore and Kilbride ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,469, including 1,009 men in the Royal Navy. Included in the total civil population were 10 officials and 103 inmates of Lorn combination poorhouse.

CONNEL FERRY is a rising village, about 6 miles north of Oban, on the shore of Loch Etive, and has a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, and in 1903 a line of railway was constructed from this place to Ballachulish. The Established church of St. Oran, erected here, is an edifice of Ben Cruachan granite, from designs by the late Mr. David Macintosh, architect, of Oban; the United Free Church was erected and opened in August, 1893, at a cost of about £800. Here is also a public library and reading and recreation rooms.

SADDELL and SKIPNESS constitute a parish in Cantyre, on the west side of Kilbrennan Sound, in the small debt court district of Campbeltown, from which port its kirktown is distant 12 miles north by sea and 14 by road; the parish extends 22 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the west by the parishes of Kilcalmonell and Killean. At Saddell village are the remains of an abbey, founded in the 12th century by Reginald, son of Sommerled Theme, of Argyll. At the mouth of Glen Saddell, near the sea, is a strong castle, a massive rectangular structure, and at Skipness, at the north end of the parish, stands another castle, built on a promontory and apparently of great strength, its outer wall being 7 feet thick and 33 in height; there are also remains of Cultes at Airds and Torrisdale. The parish church is at CARRADALE, a village on the coast, a little north of Glen Saddell, where a pier has been erected at which steamers from Glasgow and Campbeltown call regularly, and here also is a United Free church. The burial place of the Macdonalds is in the abbey of Saddell, and the castle was one of their strongholds. Major William Macalister-Hall J.P.; Austin Mackenzie esq. J.P.; John McLeod Campbell esq.; Robert Francis Graham esq. M.A., J.P. and Colin G. P. Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area is 46,888 acres; rateable value, £7,235; population in 1911, 964 in the civil and 692 in the ecclesiastical parish.

SKIPNESS is a quoad sacra parish and village, on the coast opposite to Loch Ransa, 10 miles south-east of Tarbert, and has an Established church. Population in 1911, 272.

THE SMALL ISLES.

The Islands of Canna, Muck, Rum, Sandy and Eigg together form a parish; of these, the latter was the only one originally in Inverness-shire, but by Boundary Order No. 91, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," the other four were transferred from this county to Inverness-shire, where full particulars relating to them all will be found.

SOUTHEND is a parish, occupying the southern portion of Cantyre, and including the island of Sanda, which lies about 3 miles off its south-east point; the village is on the coast opposite Sanda and is 10 miles south from Campbeltown; the country is hilly, and the inhabitants are employed in agriculture and fishing. About half a mile south of the village stands a rock called "Dunaverty," the scene of many sanguinary events, and especially of the massacre here in 1649 of 300 of the M'Donalds by General Leslie. Few traces of the castle now remain, but a mile and a half west stand the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the highlanders were interred and on the south side the lowlanders, but that distinction no longer exists. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village is a United Free church. On the island of Sanda are the ruins of the church of St. Ninian, a rectangular structure 32 feet 9 inches long, with a north doorway and three square-headed windows at the east end, splayed within; that on the south-east has, on its eastern side, a circular projecting piscina: on the north side stands a rude cross with a central boss, and near it an upright slab bearing a tall Latin cross; both are about 7 feet in height. On the summit of the Ship Rock, on this island, is a lighthouse, and there is another on the Mull of Kintyre. At DUNAVERTY there is a lifeboat station, and there is also a rocket life saving apparatus at Southend. The Duke of Argyll, Mrs. James Boyd, McKinnon McNeil Trust and John Cameron are the principal landowners. The links of the Dunaverty Golf Club stretch along the bay of Dunaverty, and have a course of 18 holes. The area comprises 31,200 acres; rateable value, £8,726; the population in 1911 was 767, of whom 12 were in Sanda Island. The island of Sanda is the property of John Ronald McDonald esq.

STAFFA is a small island about a mile and a half in circumference, lying midway between the islands of Iona and Ulva in the bay formed by the western side of Mull, and is remarkable for its caves, which attract a large number of visitors, for whose accommodation a regular steamship service from Oban is maintained during the summer months; the island is about 8 miles from the coast of Mull and about 50 from Oban, and presents an uneven table-land, resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are numerous, but those existing on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty nor for magnitude; and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for causing loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them, resembling the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest are, first, the Scallop, or Clamshell cave; second, the Buachaille, or Herdsman rock; third, the Causeway and the Face, or Colonnade; fourth, Fingal's or the Great Cave; fifth, the Boat cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave. At the Scallop, or Clamshell cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breadth at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille (the Herdsman) is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low water. The Causeway here, presenting an extensive surface, is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the great face of Staffa can be seen in perfection, as the general surface is undulating and uneven; great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave, is easy of access and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat cave is accessible only from the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban; visitors are generally landed at Fingal's cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

STRACHUR and STRATHLACHLAN, or STRALACHLAN, two civil parishes, form an ecclesiastical parish extending for 18 miles down the eastern shore of Loch Fyne from St. Catherine's Ferry to Otter ferry, bounded on the east by Kilmodan, Inverchaolain and Lochgoilhead parishes and south by Kilfinan; these parishes are in the small debt court district of Dunoon, and each has a poor combination. The village of Strachur is about 8 miles south of Inveraray, and has Established, United Free and Free churches, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited; that of Strathlachlan is about 4 miles further south; the district generally is mountainous.

ST. CATHERINE'S is a village, with a ferry on Loch Fyne, at the northern extremity of the parish, 9 miles north-west from Lochgoilhead, 4½ north-east from Strachur village and 23½ from Dunoon. The remains of Castle Lachlan are about 8 miles south-west of Strachur village. The principal landowners in Strachur are Miss Joan Campbell and Sir Harry Lauder, and John Maclachlan of Maclachlan esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner in Strathlachlan. The area of Strachur civil parish is 23,986 acres; rateable value, £3,978; the population in 1911 was 483. The area of Strathlachlan civil parish is 14,290 acres; rateable value, £1,546; the population in 1911 was 217.

TARBERT (or East Tarbert) is a village and fishing station on the west shore of and at the mouth of Loch Fyne, at the head of a good, well-sheltered harbour, and lying partly in the parish of South Knapdale and partly in that of Kilcalmonell and Kilberry, 38 miles north-east of Campbeltown and 39 south-west of Inveraray, the distance from the head of its harbour to West Tarbert loch head being only a little over a mile; the isthmus was protected by three forts, and Magnus, King of Norway (1093), is reported to have transported one of his galleys across in order to claim Cantyre as an island. The village of East Tarbert forms a semicircle around the harbour, which is only small, and the entrance to it narrow, with several sunken rocks, so that it is difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are sent to the Glasgow markets. In 1920 there were 145 motor fishing skiffs, aggregating 748 tons and employing 395 men and boys, registered in this port. Occupying a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, built by King Robert Bruce and inhabited by him in 1326; immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is the Established church; there are also United Free and Free churches. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches here. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July, which continues three days, and the first day is for the sale of horses. Population in 1901, 2,126, and in 1911, 1,983.

WEST TARBERT, one mile distant, at which there also is a good quay, is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. Two roads follow respectively the east and west sides of the loch.

TIREE (or TYREE), an island lying to the west of Mull and 3 miles south-west of Coll, is a parish in the poor combination of Mull, and is divided ecclesiastically into two parishes, that of Tiree and the quoad sacra parish of Hylipol; the island is about 12 miles in length from north-east to south-west and varies in breadth from 1 to 5 miles; it is 35 miles west from Tobermory on the north of the island of Mull. The island is flat and the soil is very fertile; there are long stretches of sandy beach. There is a small harbour, available only for small craft, at Scarinish Bay, on the south-east, and another with a quay at Hynish in the south. A pier, commenced in 1908, is now completed, the cost being almost £18,000. Here are Established and United Free churches and a Baptist chapel. In the island are numerous lochs, containing eels and trout. Marble abounds, but from some unexplained cause the quarries cannot be worked. In the churchyard at Soroby, still much used, is the shaft of a cross, carved with a representation of St. Michael overcoming the dragon, and bearing the inscription:—"Hec est crux Michaelis Archangueli Dei Anna Abbatissa de Y." Here also is a ponderous cross of granite, 3 feet 8 inches high, on a heavy plinth, and called Maclean's Cross, and a number of ancient slabs, bearing various devices. At KIRKAPOOL, north-east of the island, is a rudely-built chapel, internally about 7 feet in length, with plain round-headed doors and windows arched with slates placed endways, and on an eminence near is another chapel 23 feet 5 inches long: the walls and gables remain, and there is a window on each side at the east end, and a south doorway. At KILKENNETH, on the west, is a ruined chapel, retaining little more than its end walls and gables and a west doorway. At Kinnavara, to the south-west, is Temple Patrick, once 32 feet long, but little of the fabric is now left: under the east end is a rock basin over two feet deep, and called St. Patrick's well, and on the south side lies a slab incised with a cross. A fair for horses is held in August on the Monday before that of Mull. On the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about 12 miles west-south-west of Tiree, a lighthouse has been built of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull; the light is dioptric. The area comprises 18,896 acres; rateable value, £4,932; the population in 1911 was 998 in the civil and 827 in the ecclesiastical parish; these figures include three persons at Skerryvore Island.

HYLIPOL is a quoad sacra parish formed from Tiree, and contains an Established church; the population in 1911 was 998.

TOBERMORY, the capital of Mull, is a seaport, village and police burgh, in the parish of Kilninian and Kilmore, and a quoad sacra parish, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district; it lies on the north side of a small bay opposite to and distant 3 miles from Drimnen, in the western angle of Morven. The town, built on a series of terraces overlooking the harbour, was founded about 1788, together with Ullapool, by the British Fishery Society, as a station for fishing boats, but subsequently became the property of Alexander Allan esq. of Aros. The harbour is one of the safest among the western isles, being protected from the Sound of Mull by Calve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaves ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour, though few vessels except small craft can enter at the south-east point even at high water. There are two quays; the first was erected in 1835 by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, but subsequently a new quay and pier was constructed by F. W. Caldwell esq. proprietor of that part of the town known as Mishnish, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and opened in 1864; it is more capacious and has a greater depth of water, and is provided with offices, stores, waiting rooms and a cattle pen. About 2 miles from Tobermory, in the Sound of Mull, is the "Runagall" lighthouse, erected in 1857. The town is governed by a provost and two bailies; the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court once a month; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections for all voters residing in the islands of Mull, Coll, Iona, Tiree, Ulva, and in Morven, and, as the only town in Mull and the large circumjacent district, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat of a considerable domestic trade. The Established church was rebuilt in 1896-97, on the site of the old church, at a cost of upwards of £2,500, and opened in October, 1897, by Dr. Norman M'Leod, of Inverness: in the ancient parish of Kilcolmkill, now united to Kilninian, are some traces of the old church, and a fine slab with two figures in canopied niches and a much-worn inscription: by the side of a narrow lane, near the burial ground, is the well from which the town takes its name. The Free church, situate in the centre of the village, was built at a cost of about £3,500, the late Mrs. Bryce Allan and her son, Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, being the principal contributors. The United Free church was built in 1911 at a cost of £2,000; there is also a Baptist chapel. The County Buildings, situated above the town, are of stone, and comprise the sheriff's court and procurator fiscal's office &c. The union poorhouse, erected at a cost of £7,700 for the poor of the six surrounding parishes, and distant rather over a mile from Tobermory, will hold 130 inmates. Aros Hall, the gift of Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, includes a reading room, billiard room, circulating library, and a large hall capable of seating 300 persons; the institution is open daily for the use of the inhabitants, and visitors are also admitted on payment of a small fee. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited occupies a handsome building of stone, in the main street, completed in 1865. There is also a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and a Savings Bank. The principal hotels are the "McDonald Arms" and the Mishnish Hotel and the "Mull" temperance hotel. A handsome stone clock tower, the gift of Mrs. J. F. Bishop in memory of her sister, was erected on the promenade in 1905. A regatta is held here once a year. From a hill in the neighbourhood a view of the islands of Tiree, Coll, Eigg, Muck, Skye and various others of smaller importance is obtained. The Spanish admiral's ship "Admiral of Florence," one of the war vessels of the "Armada," in 1588, was destroyed when at anchor here by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's Government. Part of the wood of this vessel was presented to H.M. King George IV. on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large bronze breech-loading cannon, which belonged to the same vessel, found many years since in Tobermory bay. Close to the town is Mary's Loch, a beautiful expanse of water, situated between two finely-wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. The area of the burgh is 464 acres; rateable value, £4,189; population in 1911, 888, including 62 shipping and 22 inmates and officials in Mull Combination Poorhouse, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,079.

ULVA is an island and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Kilninian and Kilmore, Isle of Mull, forming the south side of Loch Tuadh, and divided at the eastern end from the Isle of Mull by a narrow strait; it measures 7 miles from east to west by 2½ in breadth, and is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Islands. There are a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 feet long, 58 feet broad, and 30 feet in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, on the mainland of Mull, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 66 feet in height directly into the sea. Here is an Established church. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark esq. J.P. who resides there. The population of the island in 1911 was 56 and in the ecclesiastical parish 170.

AYRSHIRE

AYRSHIRE is a maritime county, stretching along the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, from Wemyss Bay, opposite to Mellan in Argyllshire, by the eastern entrance to the Kyles of Bute, in an irregular curve trending eastward as far as Ayr town, from which it turns to the south-west, ending at the south at Loch Ryan, which separates it from Wigtownshire, the distance measured direct from north to south being about 55 miles (but taking the line of coast 84), its breadth varying from 5 miles at each extremity to 26 at the widest part of the crescent, just below Troon; it is bounded on the north and north-east by Renfrewshire, east by Lanarkshire and Dumfriesshire, south-east by Kirkcudbrightshire, south by Wigtownshire and west by the Firth of Clyde. The county area comprises 724,523 acres, and it is divided into the three districts of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine; and Kyle division is between the rivers Doon and Irvine. In point of size Ayrshire ranks as the seventh and in population as the sixth of the counties in Scotland. The population in 1901 was 254,468 and in 1911, 268,337, being 130,196 males and 138,141 females; the number of houses in 1911 being: inhabited, 55,975; uninhabited, 5,262 and building, 791.

Early History.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, sometimes known as the Strathclyde Britons, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were in the course of time overrun by and amalgamated with the Scoto-Irish from Kintyre, where they had founded the Dalriadic monarchy, at what is now known as Campbeltown. About 750 these again were partly conquered by a number of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle, and from this followed the close connection in Ecclesiastical government between this portion of Scotland and the see of York. From this time up to 1097 it formed part of the Celtic kingdom of Scotia, under the monarchs who held their court, first at Dunstaffnage and subsequently at Scone. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonisation commenced from England. Barons now sprang up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. In 1263, Haco, King of Norway, fought a battle near Largs with Alexander III. King of Scotland, by whom he was defeated and compelled to retire to Norway. During the wars of Bruce and Edward, Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Bruce landed in Ayrshire from Arran to claim the kingdom. Some of the various exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, occurred in this county, and scarcely any division in Scotland remained so long under the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn had their respective quarrels of long standing, causing occasionally sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiewicks of certain districts. The county was frequently distracted by feuds of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commentator, of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassillis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Colzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered inclined them to the institution of the Covenant, and the consequence was that, during the heats of the 17th century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the Privy Council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military executive; in July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III. Many remains of Danish forts and crannogs, as well as of numerous castles, are scattered over the county: along the rocky portion of the coast occur the castles of Greenan, Dunure, Colzean and Turnberry, and there are several abbeys. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochranes, Earls of Dundonald. The castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

Soil, Surface &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunningham, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out on its eastern boundary from the adjacent counties by high ridgy land. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours, and in the rocks are some remarkable caves, worthy of the inspection of the curious Though moist, the climate is healthy, the rainfall in this being much above that of the central and eastern counties, heavy rain not being infrequent and occasionally of long duration. For fully two-thirds of the year the wind blows from the west and south-west, thus causing the climate to be more temperate and mild than counties on the east coast. The principal eminences are:—Hareshaw Hill, 1,527; Cairntable, 1,650; Misty Law, 1,663; Hill of Stake, 1,711; Knockdolian, 1,950; Black Craig, 2,298; Shalloch on Minnoch, 2,520; and Kirriereoch Hill, 2,562 feet.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—It was not until about the middle of the 18th century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement at this period of Margaret Countess of Loudoun in Lorn Castle may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement, as by her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry, and the system of dairy farms then inaugurated has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland; the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market; under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been generally introduced, and with great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. According to the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," the chief crops are wheat, 1,104 acres; oats, 47,490 acres; barley, including bere, 549; beans (to be harvested as corn), 473; total of all corn crops, 49,832; small fruit, 194; potatoes, 10,054; turnips and swedes, 7,828; mangolds, 359; cabbage, 189; rape, 664; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 2,058; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses, 78,932 acres.

The total area of land is 724,251 acres; 338,397 acres being mountain and heath land used for grazing; 163,239 permanent grass; 150,828 arable land, and 27,182 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 7,235 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 2,858 unbroken horses; 44,944 cows in milk; 5,873 in calf but not in milk; 8,617 heifers in calf; 49,257 of other cattle; 151,458 ewes kept for breeding; 182,784 other sheep; sows kept for breeding, 934; other pigs, 10,693. The breed of cattle has been much improved, the Ayrshire shorthorns being much prized, both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 304; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 401; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 247; above 30 and not exceeding 75 acres, 322; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 421; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 664; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 628; above 300 acres, 71; total, 3,302.

The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county, dye works have been established, also woollen factories, iron foundries, tanneries, large steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Catrine, well known and extensive cotton works; at Kilbirnie are several works for the production of fishing nets; Mauchline is noted as the place where fancy woodwork articles are made; at Stevenston are iron works and a dynamite manufactory; at Old Cumnock is an extensive pottery and a woollen manufactory; at Irvine, chemical manufactories and iron forges; and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works.

Fishing is also carried on at all the large seaports, herring, cod, ling &c. being caught, and in the lochs and streams there is an abundance of trout, and in the larger rivers are to be found salmon. The number of fishing vessels registered December 31st, 1918, at the port of Ballantrae, which includes Ayr, was 328, of 1,294 tons.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, on December 31, 1918, as belonging to the ports of Ardrossan, Ayr and Troon, was 60, of 42,406 tons.

The trade in minerals is an important one, especially that in coal, the figures as shown by the return for 1919 being, coal produced, 3,713,337 tons, valued at £4,114,378; fire-clay, 53,023 tons; iron ore, 89,356 tons; limestone, 10,535 tons, and sandstone, 3,025 tons. There are six iron works in the county, with 31 furnaces; the average number of furnaces actually in blast in 1919 being 23 7/12, producing 304,554 tons of pig iron; the amount of iron ore, including cinder, used in the production was 639,679 tons and 494,513 tons of coal and 123,317 tons of coke.

The number employed in the mines and quarries in 1919 was: underground, 12,411; above ground, 3,248; total, 15,659.

Rivers, Lakes, Springs and Railways.—In the ridge of hills which intersects the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Esk, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr and others flow to the east and south; while the Stinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr and the Lugar traverse the county and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine and some smaller rivers water the northern parts of Ayrshire. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, which is six miles long and about three-quarters in breadth, from whence the river Doon flows. The county is well served by railways, the Glasgow and South Western, which enters the county in the north-east, near Beith, runs from there to Dalry, whence a branch goes to the coast at Ardrossan and on to Largs, the main line continuing from Dalry to Kilmarnock, Mauchline and New Cumnock, leaving the county at about three miles east from the latter place for Dumfries &c.; while from Mauchline a line passes through Tarbolton to Ayr, meeting there another branch from Kilwinning (the junction south of Dalry) which runs by Irvine and Troon to Ayr, and from Old Cumnock a branch runs east to Muirkirk, and another west forking north to Auchincruive, on the Mauchline and Ayr branch, and south-west to Dalrymple, where it joins a line which runs from Ayr to Maybole and Girvan, leaving the county three miles north of Glenwhilly station, on its way to Stranraer from Dalrymple, via Hollybush; another branch runs to Dalmellington; a branch also runs from Irvine to Kilmarnock and thence via Galston to Newmilns, and the Caledonian railway has a line from Glasgow, entering the county at Lugton, where it branches north-west to Beith and south-west via Dunlop to Kilmarnock.

Ecclesiastical and Civil Divisions.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow, and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle; it now contains 69 ecclesiastical parishes, comprised in the two presbyteries of Ayr and Irvine, within the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The civil divisions consist of 47 parishes, in which are two royal burghs (Ayr and Irvine) and 14 police burghs, and 73 complete and parts of 3 ecclesiastical parishes. The counties of Ayr and Bute return three members to Parliament in three divisions. The parliamentary constituency of the Bute and Northern division was in 1919, 40,469, that of the Kilmarnock division being 32,894 and that of the South Ayrshire division, 27,360.

ALLOWAY is a small village, 2 miles south of Ayr, with a station on the Maidens and Dunure Light railway (a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway); it is also a quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Ayr and Maybole, and is remarkable for its connection with the poet Burns and his writings. The Burns monument here consists of a circular rustic base (in which is a room containing relics), surmounted by nine fluted Corinthian pillars supporting an entabulature, above which rises a copper tripod. In Monument Ground are original statutes of Tam O'Shanter and Souter Johnny &c. by James Thom, a Scottish sculptor; on the opposite side of the road stand the remains of auld Alloway kirk, the scene of Tam O'Shanter's frolic; it is now a roofless oblong structure, believed to date from the early part of the 16th century, and has a bell hanging in its bellcot dated 1657. The present parish church stands opposite. At the entrance to the village is a thatched cottage, shown as the birthplace of the poet, 25 Jan. 1759, and adjoining is a museum containing numerous valuable manuscripts and relics, including a manuscript of "Tam O'Shanter," a 1st edition of Burns's works, purchased for £1,000, and his family Bible, for which £1,700 was paid. Near the monument is the "auld brig," and west of the kirk is the well where stood the thorn tree on which "Mungo's mither hanged herself." Close to the kirk is Cambusdoon, the seat of William James Baird esq. and a little further west is the old castle of Newark, the residence of Archibald Walker esq adjoining which is Doonside, the seat of Mrs. W. H. Dunlop. Doonholm is the seat of James Kennedy esq.; Auchendrane is the residence of Capt. Thomas Galloway; Nether Auchendrane of James G. Walker esq.; Rozelle of Lieut.-Col. Claud Hamilton; Belleisle, adjoining Rozelle, is the seat of Lord Glentanar, and Mount Charles, the neighbouring estate, is the residence of Mrs. John Neilson. Population of the parish in 1911, 1,053.

ARDROSSAN is a seaport town, police burgh and parish on the west side of the county at the mouth of the Firth of Clyde, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, and has also made some progress as a watering place. Originally only a small hamlet round the castle, it was at the beginning of this century planned as a port of outlet for Glasgow, and a fine dock built, and the importation of ores, limestone &c. and the export of coals &c. has in consequence greatly increased. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4½ in breadth, and is bounded north by West Kilbride and Dalry, east by Kilwinning, and south by Stevenston, and besides the town of Ardrossan, the parish includes a large portion of the town of Saltcoats; it is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The town is situated on a promontory to the south of the port, 30 miles south-west from Glasgow and 8 north-west of Irvine, and being laid out on a regular plan and the houses built chiefly of stone, has a fine appearance. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and four councillors. There are Established and United Free Churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew was built in 1875 and consecrated in 1883. The Rev. Reginald Victor Hodson M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford, has been rector since 1919. The Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches here. A weekly newspaper, the "Ardrossan and Saltcoats Herald," is published in the town. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of Hugh, 12th Earl of Eglinton who died in 1819, and by him and his successors a sum of nearly £400,000 has been spent upon it. The dock occupies an area of 17 acres, and is one of the best in Scotland, having a depth of water on the sill of 14 feet at low water, and 28 at high water, as well as being fitted with all the latest appliances for both loading and discharging vessels, and railway trains are run on to the quays. The island of Horse shelters the harbour from the north-west. The total value of the imports in 1919 was £720,153, the principal article being iron ore £552,182, and of the exports, £86,307, of which £60,908 was coal, coke and manufactured fuel. There is a yard for shipbuilding at the harbour, engineering works, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. On an adjoining eminence is a monument to the late Alexander McFadzean esq. M.D. who, during the later years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with this place. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 6,703 acres; rateable value of landward, £11,504. The population in 1911 was 11,720, of which 5,674 were in Ardrossan burgh and 5,646 in Saltcoats; included in the total parish was 86 on board ships. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 4,888. The area of the burgh is 739 acres; rateable value, £98,458.

AUCHINLECK is a parish and village on the eastern side of the county, 15 miles from east to west by 5 in breadth, bounded north by Muirkirk and Sorn, south by Ochiltree and Old Cumnock, and east by Lanarkshire; it is in the Kyle poor combination. Coal and ironstone are produced here, but the soil is for the most part rather unproductive. The village is somewhat above a mile north from Old Cumnock and about 3 from Sorn and Catrine, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway: Established and Roman Catholic churches and an Original Secession chapel. A Public Hall was erected in 1887 in celebration of the Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. About 3¼ miles west from the village, in an angle formed by the Dippleburn and Lugar, stand the ruins of the castle, and in the neighbourhood is the "Place of Auchinleck," a mansion erected in the 18th century by Lord Auchinleck, senator of the College of Justice and father of the eminent and amiable James Boswell esq. the friend and biographer of Johnson; the house is still the property of the Boswell family. A fair for the sale of lambs is held annually on the last Tuesday in August. The Marquess of Bute, the trustees of the late Lady Boswell, trustees of the late Sir Claud Alexander bart. trustees of the late Charles Howatson and Messrs. William Baird & Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 24,141 acres; rateable value in 1915, £36,591. The population in 1901 was 6,007, including 2,168 in the village, and in 1911 the figures were 7,424 and 3,616.

AYR

AYR is a seaport and royal burgh, the capital of the county, a parish and head of a sheriff court district and of the poor combination of Kyle, and of a petty sessional court, on the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, occupying both sides of the mouth of the river Ayr. The Glasgow and South Western Railway has a station here, with lines of rail from Glasgow, Ardrossan, Troon &c. in the north, and from Dalmellington and Girvan and Stranraer (via Maybole) in the south; there is a line running east to Muirkirk, Lanark and Edinburgh, and in 1905 a new light railway (named The Maidens and Dunure) was opened, which runs along the coast by the "Heads of Ayr" to Girvan. Ayr is 77 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 33 south-south-west of Glasgow, 34 south-south-west of Paisley, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 11 south of Irvine. The parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded south by Maybole, east by Dalrymple and Coylton, and north by Monkton.

In the 12th century, when the town was founded by William the Lion, traces of a Roman station were still extant. Wallace appears to have relieved it from an English garrison, and Cromwell built a fort, using for the purpose the old church and giving the inhabitants a grant of money, with which they built what is now known as the old kirk, on the site of a Dominican priory. The river is crossed by four bridges, two of which are celebrated by Burns as "the twa briggs o' Ayr;" the old bridge, built in the reign of Alexander III. (1249-1285) by Isobel Lowe and her two sisters, was thoroughly restored between 1907-10, the sum of £11,000 being subscribed by admirers of Burns' poems. The new bridge, built in 1788, was rebuilt in 1878.

The municipal burgh of Ayr is formed by the districts of Newton and Wallacetown, in conjunction with Ayr proper, and the civil government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and eleven councillors. For parliamentary purposes Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban, in Argyllshire, the group returning one member to Parliament. The municipal burgh of Ayr was, up to 1895, within the parishes of Ayr, Newton-on-Ayr and St. Quivox, but by a Local Government Order, dated 15th May, 1895, these three parishes were united under the one parish of Ayr.

The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by the construction of an extensive stone pier, affording a greater depth of water and security for vessels. A dock, eight acres in extent, with a quay space of 2,000 feet, and constructed at a cost of £150,000, has a depth of water at low tide of 15 feet. In 1877 the south side of the harbour was entirely rebuilt, at a cost of £23,000, and the Glasgow and South Western Railway Co. have built a new bridge to the south side of the harbour, thus affording greater facilities for the iron ore and limestone traffic. The income of the Harbour Trust for 1914 was £40,007. An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland, the total for 1913 being 755,541 tons; coal mines, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The imports comprise iron ore, beans and timber. The total value of the imports in 1913 was £244,373, the principal articles being iron ore, £134,795 and timber, £73,627. The amount of customs revenue received in 1913 was £1,869. The tonnage of vessels that arrived at the port in the foreign trade was 100,274. In the general coasting trade 1,341 vessels of 163,525 tons arrived at the port, and in the trade between Great Britain and Ireland 1,730 vessels of 281,866 tonnage. The number departed was: General coasting 954 of 164,842 tons and between Great Britain and Ireland 2,206 of 311,444 tonnage. The number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port December 31, 1913, was 15 of 1,017 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters A. R.

There are regular sailings of steamers between Ayr and Belfast, Larne, Campbeltown, Girvan, Greenock and Glasgow.

A weekly market is held on Tuesdays for grain, cattle and dairy produce. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the Friday before the second Wednesday in January; the third Tuesday in April, for hiring; the last Friday in April, for cattle; the Thursday before the second Monday and third Thursday in July; third Tuesday in October, for hiring; and on the second Friday in October.

The town is lighted with electric light, installed in 1895 at a cost of about £20,000, and with gas supplied by two companies, and is supplied with water from Loch Finlas and the Milton springs, both supplies being of excellent character and abundant in quantity. The Corporation Electric Tramways, opened in Sept. 1901, run to Prestwick Cross, to Alloway (Burns' Monument) and to the new Racecourse. There are three Established churches and a Mission hall. The parish church (the present old church of Ayr), which replaced the old church of St. John, taken by Cromwell for his fort, was founded in 1650, on the site of the Dominican priory; the pulpit was transferred to it from the old church of St. John: within the church are several mural tablets, including one to General Neill, who fell at the siege of Lucknow; also the old colours of the 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, and a brass tablet to the officers and men who fell in South Africa. There are also five United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church, Baptist, Congregational and Original Seceders' chapels and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1835 and rebuilt in 1900, will seat 700 persons, and attached to it is St. John Baptist's Mission; St. Oswald's Mission, Maybole, and St. Martin's Mission, Prestwick; the Rev. James Vavasor Hammond B.A. of Selwyn College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1904. The Town's buildings, at the corner of High street and New Bridge street, erected in 1828 at a cost of £10,000, include a tower, with spire 219 feet in height; the spacious hall, capable of seating about 1,100 persons, was destroyed by fire in 1897, but rebuilt in 1904 at a cost of £12,000, and a new organ built at a cost of £1,300; the buildings afford offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain, surveyor, water engineer, medical officer of health, sanitary inspector and burgh police; here also the burgh records are kept and the burgh courts held. The "Wallace Tower," in High street, built in 1830 on the site of an ancient tower, has on its front a statue of Wallace, by James Thom, a Scottish sculptor. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of Newmarket street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having on the west side the court house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. Three statues in bronze have been placed within the square, one to Archibald William, 13th Earl of Eglinton, lord lieutenant of the county, and for some years Viceroy of Ireland, who died 4 October, 1861; another to Brigadier-Gen. J. G. Neill C.B. born in the square, and killed at Lucknow, 25th September, 1857, and a third to Sir James Fergusson bart. of Kilkerran M.P. Governor-General of New Zealand &c. A gun, captured at Sebastopol, stands in the enclosure round the County buildings. His Majesty's gaol is at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay.

The new Gaiety Theatre, in Carrick street, was opened by a public company in 1902.

Ayr Academy, founded by subscription in 1796, is conducted by two joint rectors, with six masters and about 35 assistants. The present building was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and the management is now under the Ayr Education Authority: in 1911 the present building was completed: attached to the academy are a number of Bursaries offered by the Governors of the Ayr Educational Trust and other bodies, some tenable at the academy and others at the universities. The school is a centre for the training of junior students who intend to enter the teaching profession, and also for the higher education of pupils drawn from parishes throughout the county. In 1907 a new Art department was erected at a cost of £8,000, and consisting of an architectural room, a workshop, an art studio, a modelling room and a painting studio. The Carnegie Public Library was erected in 1893, at a cost of about £12,000, by the late A. Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle; it contains 18,000 volumes in the lending and 6,500 volumes in the reference library. Three newspapers are published in Ayr, namely, the "Ayr Observer," on Tuesday: the "Ayrshire Post," on Friday, and the "Advertiser," on Thursday. The Low Green is a public park of about 50 acres facing the sea; a pavilion was erected in 1911 to hold 2,500 persons. Newton public park of 14 acres contains three bowling greens and a model yacht pond. R. A Oswald esq. J.P. of Auchincruive and James A. Campbell esq. J.P. of Craigie have presented to the town a public walk extending along the banks of the Ayr to Overmills, a distance of about 3 miles The old racecourse on the south side of the town is now used as municipal golf links. A new racecourse, one mile and five furlongs in length, was completed at Hawkhill in 1907, at a cost of about £40,000 including the erection of stands &c: there are meetings in May, July, August and September of each year. The Earl of Eglinton's foxhounds hunt the county four times a week; the kennels are at Kilwinning, and Kilmarnock, Irvine and Ayr are convenient places for hunting visitors. There are curling and bowling clubs. The Ayr County Hospital, formerly in Mill street, was removed in 1883 to new buildings in the Holmston road, erected in that year, at a cost of about £20,000, and containing 100 beds; in 1914, 1,059 in-patients and 711 out-patients received treatment. There is also a Dispensary, and in Heathfield road a Hospital for infectious and tuberculosis cases; there are 30 beds. The Ayr (District) Mental Hospital for the County of Ayr, situated at Glengall, 2¼ miles from the town, originally opened in 1869, was considerably enlarged in 1906 by the addition of a new hospital and administrative department, and now provides a total of 650 beds. There is an Industrial school in St. Leonard's road, erected in 1875 for 100 boys. Robert Burns, the poet, was born 25 Jan. 1759, in the village of Alloway, about 2 miles south of Ayr, and his birthplace is still shown: Andrew Michael Ramsay D.C.L. historian and biographer, commonly called the "Chevalier Ramsay," and sometime tutor to the children of Prince James Edward Stuart, was born at Ayr, 9 June, 1686. At a short distance on the southern shore is Greenan Castle, a rectangular structure, on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned the rocky islet Ailsa Craig, rising nearly 1,100 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. J.P. vice-lieutenant of Ayrshire, J. A. Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. George Coats esq. J.P. Sir James Coats bart. J.P. Mrs. Dunlop, Miss Hamilton and William Wilson esq. J.P. are the principal landowners.

The area of the old parish of Ayr comprised 6,939 acres and the new parish is 12,494 acres; rateable value, £ : the population in 1901 was 31,537, and in 1911, 36,229, including 52 patients and 29 officials in the County Hospital, 549 patients and 121 officials and their families in the District Asylum, 168 inmates and 7 officials in Kyle Combination Poorhouse and 82 in H.M. Prison, and 193 military and 56 other occupants in the barracks; the area of the burgh is 2,001 acres; rateable value, £ : the population in 1911 was 32,986, and of the wards was, First, 4,073; Second, 3,702; Third, 5,630; Fourth, 5,404; Fifth, 6,222; Sixth, 8,135 The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was: St. John (parish church), 7,602; Newton-upon-Ayr, 8,933; St. Leonard's, 4,120; St. Quivox, 1,787, Wallacetown, 8,776.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 30,492. The number of electors on the Ayr parliamentary register in 1915 was 5,494.

NEWTON, formerly a parish, but now amalgamated with Ayr, is divided from that place by the river, and has two Established churches and two United Free churches and Salvation Army barracks; here the principal manufactures of the town are carried on. There are two chemical works, a carpet factory, lace works, two shoe factories and several other manufacturing establishments. The railway communicates on this side with the harbour and dock, and the mineral products of the upper portion of the county are mostly shipped here.

ST. QUIVOX, a populous parish, amalgamated with the parish of Ayr by a Local Government Order, dated May, 1895, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton on Ayr and Monkton. Here is an Established church. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations.

WALLACETOWN is a thickly populated district adjoining Newton. The Established church here, erected in 1836, at an expense of nearly £1,500, has sittings for upwards of 800 persons. The Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone: there is also a United Free church.

WHITLETTS is a small village in St. Quivox ward, parish of Ayr, and distant therefrom about 1½ miles east.

BARRHILL, see COLMONELL.

BEITH is a town and parish, in the north of the county, on the borders of Renfrewshire, and originally partly in that county, but transferred entirely to Ayrshire by the Local Government Act, 1889; the town lies 11 miles north-west from Kilmarnock, 10 north of Irvine and 22 north of Ayr, and has stations on the Glasgow and South Western main line, the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway and the Caledonian line; the parish extends 7 miles from north to south, by about 4 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt county district of Kilmarnock; it is bounded on the north by Renfrewshire, west by Kilbirnie, south by Dalry and east by Dunlop. The town stands on an eminence commanding an extensive view of the country around, and of the Loch of Kilbirnie; it contains many excellent houses, is lighted with gas and well supplied with good water, and is a place of some considerable trade, being noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here, both for the home and export trade. The tanning, currying and preparation of leather is also carried on, as well as cabinet making and upholstery, and the production of fishing and other nets. Silk printing is carried on at Roebank. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal and iron and abundance of limestone. Lime burning is followed to a limited extent. The Established church, erected in 1807, stands on the most elevated part of the town, 343 feet above the level of the sea; it has a tower, and in 1885 was enlarged, reseated, and thoroughly renovated at a cost of nearly £3,000; and in 1899 a hall, with 600 sittings, was erected at a cost of over £1,800. The United Free church, in Mitchell street, was rebuilt in 1892 in the Gothic style, at a cost of about £2,000. There is also a Congregational chapel. The Town House, built by subscription in 1817, contains a library; the lower part consists of Parish Council chambers. The constabulary station, with court house adjoining, is a stone building, opened in 1884, and erected at a cost of about £1,500. The court for the justices of the peace is held on the first Monday in each month. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Masonic Hall, in Eglinton street, erected in 1907, is a building of stone, its lower stage being arranged as shops. Spier's school, built and endowed from funds amounting to over £60,000 left by the late Mrs. Spier, of Marshalland and Cuff, is a school for higher education, established under a scheme of the Scotch Education Endowments Commissioners: the buildings comprise a town hall, board room, numerous class rooms, and a large school house, occupied by the head master and specially adapted for the reception of boarders. Fairs are held on the first Friday in January (old style) (horse), on the first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), on the 30th of August (horse), and the first Friday after the 12th of November (old style). The whole of the parish is enclosed, and is almost all arable. At Giffen, a short distance from the town, are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hesselhead; and at the top of Cuff hill, a considerable eminence, is a rocking stone. Two large stone coffins were discovered here many years ago. Trearne is the seat of Robert Ralston-Patrick esq. J.P.; Woodside House is the property of Mrs. Neil Kennedy Cochran-Patrick and the residence of J. Arthur Findlay esq. The area comprises 11,189 acres; assessable value, £47,779; the population in 1911 of the civil parish was 6,609, of which 4,256 are in the town ward and 6,609 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CATRINE is a thriving manufacturing town and quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Sorn, with a terminal station on a branch from Muchline, opened in 1903, of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 72 miles south-south-west of Edinburgh, 32 south of Glasgow, 14 north-east of Ayr, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 5 north from Old Cumnock, situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north bank of the river Ayr. This place in 1778 contained only a blacksmith's shop and a meal mill, but its rapid increase arose from the erection of cotton works by the late Claud Alexander esq. of Ballochmyle, and the business is now carried on by Messrs. James Finlay and Co. Limited. There are Established and a United Free church, a Congregational Union chapel and a Mission hall. The Town Hall, opened in 1882, was erected at a cost of £1,000 left by the late John Wilson, who also bequeathed £1,000, the interest of which, about £40, is given to the poor at Christmas; the hall is under the control of six trustees. The A. M. Brown Institute, erected in 1898 in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, at a cost of upwards of £3,000, was the gift to the town of A. M. Brown esq. and contains reading and billiard rooms, a gymnasium and a library. The public library, of about 6,000 volumes, has now been removed to the institute. On the south side of the river Ayr is a school in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £3,000. The population in 1911 was 2,337.

Here is an Established church, erected in 1833, with 1,000 sittings, three United Free churches and a Baptist chapel. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. The Town Hall was erected in 1888, at a cost of nearly £1,000, from plans by Mr. Allan Stevenson, of Ayr, and is of stone; the building contains a lecture hall seating about 400 people, besides offices. Various mines of coal are worked in this neighbourhood. The Marquess of Bute, Lord Oranmore and Browne K.P. Michael H. D. Thomson-Carmichael esq. William Hyslop esq. J.P. Lieut.-Col. Sir James Stuart-Menteth bart. the trustees of Neil Griffith Buchanan esq. and the New Cumnock Collieries Limited are the principal landowners. CUMNOCK (OLD) is a town in the centre of the county, east of Ayr, and together with Holmhead was in 1866 erected into a police burgh; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and is a market town, 60 miles south-west of Edinburgh, 166 east of Ayr, and 15 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, on the road between Dumfries on the south-east and Glasgow on the north, being 43 miles north-west from the former and 40 south from the latter. The Glasgow and South Western line has a station half a mile east, and the Ayr and Cumnock line a station a quarter of a mile south of the town. The parish of Old Cumnock, which is in the poor combination of Kyle and the head of a small debt court district, extends 9 miles from east to west by 3 from north to south, and is bounded on the north by Sorn, east by Auchinleck, south by New Cumnock and west by Ochiltree. The town is situated in a deep sheltered hollow, at the confluence of the Glaisnock and Lugar waters, and consists of a square, with several main streets. There is an Established church, a United Free church, entirely rebuilt at the cost of the late Mrs Crichton, of Hillside, Cumnock, and now seating 520 persons, Congregational and Baptist chapels, and a Roman Catholic church, the cost of which was defrayed by the Marquess of Bute. A cemetery was formed a few years ago a little to the south of the town, at a cost of about £1,000. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The Town Hall, opened in 1885, is an edifice in the Classic style, from plans prepared by Mr. R. S. Ingram, of Kilmarnock, and was erected at a cost of nearly £3,000, towards which John, 3rd Marquess of Bute, contributed £500 and the site. There is also a Public Library, established in 1792. Baird's Institute, erected in 1891, at an expenditure of £3,000, was the gift of the late John Baird esq. of this town, who left funds both for its construction and endowment; it contains a museum, billiard, reading and recreation rooms. The Cottage Hospital was built and furnished by the Marchioness of Bute, at an expense of over £2,000. The sum of £20 annually, left for free education by the late Charles Duncan, merchant, of London, a native of this parish, has now, by the Commissioners of Endowments, been mostly applied to higher education in the public school. One newspaper, the "Cumnock Chronicle" is published here on Friday. The market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the fourth Thursday after Candlemas, the Thursday after the 6th of March, the Wednesday after the 6th of June, and the 27th of October. The manufacture of electrical switch gearage is carried on extensively by Messrs. George McCartney and Co. of Burnside works. In the neighbourhood is Terringzean Castle, now in ruins, also Dumfries House, a seat of the Marquess of Bute. The old churchyard at Barrhill was at one period the place of execution, and contains the remains of three persons who were shot on the spot in 1685 by a party of Highlanders, for their adherence to the Covenant; here also Alexander Peden, commonly called "The Prophet," was buried at the gallows foot. In 1891 a fine monument of Aberdeen granite, 21 feet high, and of Gothic design, was erected to his memory, at an expense of £300. The Marquess of Bute, Major-Gen. R. Bannatine-Allason C.B., C.M.G. Lord Skerrington and the trustees of the late P. C. D. Boswell esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 14,169 acres; rateable value in 1915 was £52,800; the population in 1911 was 5,465, including 3,417 in the police burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 5,352.

DALJARROCK, see COLMONELL.

DALMELLINGTON is a parish and village, the latter being a burgh of barony, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 72 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 south of Glasgow, 42 north-west of Dumfries, 24 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, 15 south-east of Ayr, 14 east of Maybole, 12 south of Old Cumnock and 7 east of Straiton. The village is situated on the north bank of the water of Doon, and near to the base of an eminence, from the summit of which a fine view is obtained. The parish is in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr, and extends 9 miles from north-west to south-east by 3 to 5 in breadth, and is bounded on the south-west by Straiton, north by Dalrymple and Ochiltree and east by New Cumnock. Here are Established and United Free churches, a public library and reading room and a public hall. About 3 miles south of the village is Loch Doon, celebrated for its fine trout and a great resort for anglers; boats are furnished by the proprietors of the hotels at this place—The Black Bull and the Eglinton. The loch is a beautiful sheet of water, with a hard rocky shore, extending 8 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and abounding with trout of fine flavour. In 1826 a fishing party discovered at the bottom of the loch what appeared to be boats, and, having obtained the necessary assistance, they succeeded in raising three canoes, the largest measuring 24 feet in length by 4 in breadth, hewn out of a solid log of oak. Two were much decayed, but the third was so little impaired as to allow of its being floated on the surface, with a person in it, for a considerable time; two are now preserved at the head of Ness Glen, by Mrs. McAdam, of Craigengillan, for the inspection of visitors, and the third is in the Kelvin Grove Museum at Glasgow. On an island in the lake are the remains of Balloch Castle, in which, in June, 1306, after the battle of Methven, Sir Christ'l Seton, brother-in-law to Robert Bruce, took refuge, but the castle being stormed he was captured and executed at Dumfries. About 3 miles north-west of Dalmellington, on the road to Ayr, are the extensive iron works and collieries of the Dalmellington Iron Co. Limited, who built the villages of Craigmark, Waterside, Lethan Hill, Burnfoot Hill and Benwhat. The village of WATERSIDE has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; the village, which is lighted by gas and electricity, has a Roman Catholic church and a Mission church. Mrs. McAdam, Major Cathcart, the Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O., D.L. and the Dalmellington Iron Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,818 acres; rateable value, £30,000 (with railway); population in 1901, 5,261 in the civil and 5,118 in the ecclesiastical parish, and in 1911, 6,183 civil and 6,014 ecclesiastical.

DALRY

DALRY is a parish and village-town in the Cunninghame district and poor combination and in the small debt court of Beith, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 69 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 25 (22 by rail) south-west of Glasgow, 16 south-south-west of Paisley, 5 south-west of Beith, 4 north of Kilwinning and 7 north of Saltcoats, pleasantly situated on a rising ground, surrounded by the rivers Caaf, Rye and Garnock; it consists of twelve streets, three of which diverge from a small central square, and there are many well-built houses. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and supplied with water by a system of gravitation, the supply affording 130,000 gallons per day. There are three reservoirs in this parish, one at Camphill and Routenburn supplying Paisley; another at Munnock for Irvine and district; and a third at Auld Muir for the town of Dalry; the total cost of carrying out the scheme amounting to £10,500. The works are the property of the Irvine and District Water Board. The sanitary arrangements are under the control of the County Council. Dalry bestows the title of Baron Boyle of Dalry upon the Boyle family, Earls of Glasgow. The local industries comprise worsted spinning, which is extensively carried on by Messrs. Thomas Biggart and Co. Limited, blanket and tweed manufacturing by Messrs. Kyle, Aitken and Gardiner Limited, and the manufacture of hosiery; lime, coal and ironstone abound in the neighbourhood; brick making is a rising industry. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The Public Hall, in Aitken street, belongs to the Parish Council; in Garnock street there is a picture house and the local library. In the centre of the town is a handsome granite fountain, presented by the late Thomas Biggart esq. of Baidland Hill. The Established church, rebuilt and considerably enlarged at a cost of nearly £6,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire, and was designed by Mr. David Thomson, architect, of Glasgow; four of the windows are filled with Munich stained glass and there is a marble monument in the vestibule to General Neill, who fell at the relief of Lucknow (Sep. 25-26, 1857). There is also the West Parish Established church and mission hall; two United Free churches; a Roman Catholic church, and a Mission Hall, opened in 1889, at a cost of about £4,000, defrayed by the late Rev. Robert Stevenson D.D. of this town. The Episcopal church of St. Peter, built in 1888, will seat about 170 persons. The Biggart Memorial Hall in Courthill street, erected by the late Thomas Biggart esq. in memory of his son, is also used for mission purposes. The cemetery at Kirkland was extended in 1899 by the addition of four acres. A public park of about 26 acres, presented to the town by Mr. John Blair W.S. Edinburgh, a native of Dalry, was laid out in 1892, at considerable expense, and includes skating and curling ponds; it is managed by a body of trustees. The annual fair is held on the last day in July. Blair House, 2 miles from Dalry, is an ancient mansion, a portion of which retains the date of 1203, but the original and still existing tower is said to date from 1130; the fabric is in good preservation, and its walls are of extraordinary thickness, one of the passages, a modern alteration, passing through a wall 14 feet thick; the mansion is at present occupied by Col. F. G. Blair C.B., C.M.G., A.D.C., D.L., J.P., T.D. Visitors are permitted to inspect the beautifully laid out grounds. In the parish is a natural cave, about 103 feet in length and from 5 to 12 feet in height; the roof is encrusted with petrifactions, and over the entrance projects a vast rock, 30 feet by 27. The interior is arched, and expands near the middle into a spacious chamber, 35 feet long by 12 broad and 13 feet in height. In the reign of Charles II. this cavern afforded a refuge to the Covenanters of the parish, and it is also supposed to have given refuge to Wallace and his co-patriot Sir Bryce Blair, who was executed at Ayr by the English for the part he took with Wallace in the war of independence; adjoining is a farm known as "Wallace Fauld." To the west of the town is a beautiful natural cascade, which has a singular appearance during the continuance of frost. At Camphill and Routenburn in Dalry parish the Scottish army is said to have encamped previous to the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263, in which Alexander III. defeated the Norwegians under Haco. Acreage of parish, 19,198; population in 1911, 7,418, of which 4,760 were returned as belonging to the town ward and 912 in Glengarnock and Barkip ward; rateable value, £55,529.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Parish church, 5,902, and West church, formed from Dalry, Ardrossan and Kilwinning, 1,566.

John Wallace. In the parish are three small British forts. The area comprises 7,835 acres; rateable value, £18,822; the population in 1911 was 1,307 in the civil and 1,031 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DARVEL is a police burgh and manufacturing town and ecclesiastical parish, formed from Galston and Loudoun civil parishes, on the river Irvine, in the southern portion of the parish of Loudoun, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; the town is 9 miles east-by-south from Kilmarnock and 18 north-east from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The burgh consists of one principal street, from which a few small ones diverge. The Established church, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected at a cost of about £3,000: there are also two United Free churches, and Original Seceders' and Congregational churches. The cemetery here was endowed with £1,000 for its maintenance by the late Mr. John Fleming. The Working Men's Institute was erected by the late Miss Brown, of Lanfine, in July, 1870, at a cost of £2,200; it contains a library and reading room and a recreation room. There is also a free school, endowed by the late Alexander Mair, for the education of the children of this village, and now under the direction of the Ayr-shire Education Authority. The manufacture of lace, lace and tapestry curtains and muslin affords employment to a number of hands. The area is 215 acres; rateable palue, £18,134; the population in 1911 was 3,590 in the burgh and 4,046 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DREGHORN is a small parish lying to the east of Irvine, from which place its kirk-town is distant 2½ miles; the parish, which is in the Cunninghame poor combination and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, extends between 6 and 7 miles in an irregular curve from north-east to west by a breadth of about 2 miles, and is bounded north by Stewarton, east by Fenwick, south by Kilmaurs and west by Irvine. There are stations at Dreghorn and Springside on the branch line of the Glasgow and South Western railway from Busbie Junction to Ardrossan; the same railway has a station at Cunningham head, and the Caledonian branch from Kilmarnock to Dunlop skirts the eastern portion of the parish, the nearest station being Kilmaurs, about 5 miles distant. There is an Established church and two United Free churches, a Congregational chapel and a Mission hall. In the neighbourhood are extensive coal mines and fire clay and brick works. Water is supplied by the County Council mains from North Craig reservoir at Kilmarnock, having been laid down in 1898 for this purpose.

SPRINGSIDE is a small village in this parish, and has an Established Church hall and a United Free Mission hall. The Springhill Institute, erected in the village in 1894 by the Misses Maryann, Margaret and Helena Finnie and Mrs. Jean Buntine, daughters of the late Archibald Finnie esq. of Springhill, Kilmarnock, is a structure of red brick and contains reading, billiard and recreation rooms and a library of over 600 volumes. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton, Lady Sophia Montgomerie and Miss Mure are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,623 acres; rateable value, £27,126; the population in 1911 was 4,373 in the civil and 4,126 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DUNLOP is a parish and village, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; 3 miles north of Kilmarnock and the same distance east of Dalry, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway: the portion of the parish in this county extends 3 miles from north to south and the same in breadth, and is bounded on the north and north-east by Neilston, on the south-east and south by Stewarton, and on the north-west by Beith. The Established church was erected in 1835. In the churchyard is a small mortuary chapel, now known as the "Picture House," erected by James (Hamilton) 1st Viscount Clandeboye, in 1641, over the grave of his father, the Rev. Hans Hamilton, for 45 years minister of the parish and d. 30 May, 1608; it contains a monument in marble. Here also is a United Free church and a Public hall, with reading and recreation rooms, erected by public subscription, at a cost of about £800. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. The old schoolhouse was also built by Lord Clandeboye, and in the wall is a stone formerly bearing the date 1641, and an inscription stating that it was erected and endowed by him "in love of his parish, in King James the Sixt his Raigne," but this is now obliterated; the building is in excellent preservation, but is not now used for school purposes. Dunlop has long been noted for the excellent quality of its cheese, which bears a high character throughout Scotland. Several firms are also engaged in ham curing. About the close of the 17th century, one Barbara Gilmour is said to have commenced the practice of making cheese from the entire milk, nothing but skimmed milk having been used in the process in this district previous to that period; at present all the cheese similarly made in the western counties receives the appellation of "Dunlop," a large quantity being still made here annually. A considerable trade in meal is also carried on by the inhabitants of the village and surrounding territory. The Dunlop and Stewarton Agricultural Society holds an annual show of cattle &c. in April. Near the village, and resting on a small knoll, is a stone of large dimensions, called the "Ogirtstane" and supposed to have been employed in some ancient rites of worship. Two fairs for the sale of dairy stock are held, one about the middle of May, the other on the 12th of November; both are generally well attended. The principal landowners are Mrs. Houison-Craufurd and the trustees of the late Col. William Mure. The area comprises 7,180 acres; assessable value, £19,771; population, 1911, 1,353.

FENWICK (anciently Finnick) is a parish and village, in Cunninghame district and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is about 4 miles north-by-east from Kilmarnock, its nearest railway station, on the Glasgow and South Western railway, situated on the banks of the Macharnock stream and on the road to Glasgow. This parish was originally a part of Kilmarnock, from which it was disjoined in 1641, and was called New Kilmarnock or New Kirk of Kilmarnock; but the village of Finnick, now known as Laigh Finnick or Rose Finnick, to distinguish it from the new village which sprang up beside the Kirk, and was called the Kirktown, eventually gave its name to the whole parish. Here are Established and United Free churches. At a former period the district was chiefly moorland, but the greater portion of the parish is now under cultivation. John Howie, who chronicled the sufferings of the martyrs and confessors of the Covenant, was tenant of the moorland farm of Lochgoin, in this parish, and his descendants still continue to occupy it. Many memorials of the Covenanters are preserved in the farmhouse, including the bible and sword of Captain Paton and the flag of the Phinick Covenanters used at the encounter at Bothwell Bridge, 22 June, 1679. The Hon. Thomas Godfrey Polson Corbett M.C. Lieut.-Colonel William Reginald Houison-Craufurd D.L., J.P. and Edward Richmond Paton are the principal landowners. Area, 18,077 acres; rateable value, £19,822; population of the parish in 1911, 1,062.

FISHERTON, see MAYBOLE.

GALSTON is a town and parish, with a station on a branch from Hurlford of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is in the eastern portion of the county, and includes parts of three towns, Darvel, Galston and Newmilns. The town is a police burgh lying on the river Irvine in the parishes of Galston and Loudoun, 15 miles north-east from Ayr, 22 south from Glasgow and 5 east from Kilmarnock; the parish, which extends 8 miles from east to west by 3½ in depth, is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock and is bounded on the north by Loudoun, west by Riccarton and south by Sorn and Mauchline. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The Established church was built about 1820, on the site of the previous church: the graveyard has been closed for many years, but contains a few stones of old date and some interest, notably one carved with the flag of the Galston Covenanters: the United Free church is an edifice in the Gothic style, erected at a cost of about £1,100. Trinity United Free church, erected in 1888, at a cost of about £2,500, is a building of red sandstone, in the Gothic style, from the designs of Mr. J. D. Wilson, architect, of Glasgow. The Roman Catholic church of St. Sophia, opened in December, 1886, and erected by the 3rd Marquess of Bute (d. 1900), at a cost of £10,000, is a structure in the Romanesque style, from designs by Dr. R. Rowland Anderson, architect, of Edinburgh. The public halls are the Victoria Assembly Hall, the Good Templars' Hall and the Co-operative Hall. Brown's Institute was erected in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, given by the late Miss Brown, of Lanfine, and consists of a reading room, a library, containing about 3,400 volumes, and recreation and billiard rooms. Blair's school, opened in 1841, under the will of the late Charles Blair esq. of Galston, who bequeathed certain heritable property, to accumulate until the income amounted to £200 yearly, has under the "Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882," now become incorporated with the public schools. Here is a corn mill with water power; weaving and lace making and coal mining are also carried on, and a large quantity of coal is obtained from the estates of the Duke of Portland, who is superior of a portion of the parish. The surface of the parish is diversified with hills, but the land is generally arable, and there is a considerable quantity of wood. The district is watered by some small tributaries of the Irvine and the river Avon, which rises in the upper part of the parish. About a mile from the town is Loudoun Castle, a large structure in a modern castellated style, the property of the Countess of Loudoun; near this is the old castle of Cessnock and Barr. Cessnock Castle is the residence of J. Harling Turner esq. J.P. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. and Sir Charles W. Cayzer bart are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 15,154 acres; rateable value of landward, £2,781. The area of the burgh is 1,910 acres; rateable value, £15,790; the population of the town of Galston in 1911 was 5,286, and the total of the parish was 7,207.

GIRVAN

GIRVAN is a parish and police burgh in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination and in the parliamentary division of South Ayrshire, 90 miles west south-west of Edinburgh, 56 south-west of Glasgow, 35 north-north-west of Portpatrick, 31 north-north-east of Stranraer 21 south by west of Ayr, 13 north by east of Ballantrae, 12 south-south-west of Maybole and 6 south-west of Dailly, with a station on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, extended to Portpatrick in 1876: the town stands on the left bank of the Garvan or Girvan river, near its confluence with the Firth of Clyde. The harbour of Girvan, which underwent considerable improvements in 1869-70, and more extensively in 1881-83, at the expense of the Harbour Commissioners, is now considered safe and convenient for shipping. Large quantities of grain of various kinds are annually exported hence, chiefly to Liverpool and Glasgow. The principal trade of the place is now the shipping of coal from the Girvan Valley in small steamers of about 10 feet 6 inches draft, and also the herring fishery which occurs twice a year, beginning in December and May. The government of the town is vested in the town council consisting of a provost, two junior magistrates and nine councillors. A justice of the peace court is held every month. There are two Established and two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John, erected at a cost of £1,100, is a structure in the Gothic style, and will seat 200 persons: attached to it is the Mission church of St. Oswald, at Maybole. A new Town Hall, the gift of John McMaster, The Holt, Canterbury, has been erected on the site of the old town clock, which is now part of the new building. The M'Kechnie Institute, at the corner of Dalrymple street and Ailsa street, erected in 1887-8 at a cost of about £3,000, by the trustees of the late Thomas and Robert M'Kechnie and since endowed with about £2,000 by the late Mrs. Hart, of Girvan, is a building of red sandstone, consisting of library, reading rooms for both sexes, and smoking, billiard, draught and committee rooms. Mr. M'Kechnie left also the interest of £1,000, of which £12 is given to the precentor of the church for the instruction of 10 of the children in sacred music, the balance being divided among such poor householders as are not receiving parochial relief. The McClymont trust, amounting to £250 per annum, left in 1879 by Archibald McClymont esq. is in part given to the deserving poor and in part to the Royal Infirmary, Glasgow, the town of Girvan thus acquiring the right to send three patients annually to that institution; a portion of the fund is also assigned for educational purposes and for the support of the Girvan Town Mission. A market, chiefly for grain, is held on Monday; and the fairs are on the first Mondays in April and October, for stock, hiring servants, and general business. North Victor Cecil Dalrymple-Hamilton esq. of Bargany, is superior of the burgh. At a point in the Firth exactly opposite is the rocky islet called Ailsa Craig, which is 11 miles distant, and rises out of the Firth to the height of 1,097 feet: it is 2½ miles in circumference, and the top, which is conical, is covered with a luxuriant crop of heath, grass, ferns and other plants, supporting great numbers of goats and rabbits, and on the precipitous sides of the rock inconceivable numbers of solan geese, puffins and gannets flutter about, and produce an incessant deafening noise. On a long terrace, or shoulder of the craig, at the elevation of 200 feet from the base, stands a deserted square tower, or castellated house, still very perfect as a ruin. Here also is a lighthouse. Higher up are two beautiful springs of water, one of which irrigates a marshy tract covered with various plants, and amongst others the hydrocotile vulgaris, which here grows to an extraordinary size. The rock (locally in the parish of Dailly) belongs to the Marquis of Ailsa. The area of the civil parish is 14,585 acres; rateable value of landward, £16,868. The area of the burgh is 489 acres; rateable value, £27,793; the population in 1901 was 4,024, and in 1911, 5,331; burgh, 4,473; landward, 858. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,829.

IRVINE

IRVINE is an ancient royal burgh, seaport, parish, the head of a presbytery, and of Cunninghame district and poor combination, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, 67 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-south-west of Glasgow, 11 north of Ayr, 11 south of Beith and 7 west of Kilmarnock. The town is agreeably situated on rising ground on the north bank of the river Irvine, about a mile from its junction with the Garnock water and the sea, and is united by a fine stone bridge of four arches to the suburb of Fullarton on the south side of the river, but in the parish of Dundonald, which adjoins the Firth of Clyde, and includes the harbour and quay. In 1881 an Act of Parliament was obtained for extending the boundaries of the burgh, and for other purposes. By this Act, Fullarton, sometimes called the Halfway, was amalgamated with the burgh, so that the whole town is now under the jurisdiction of the municipality. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and twelve councillors. A bailie court is held every lawful day, as business may require: and one for the recovery of small debts and for the trial of criminal cases before the justices is also held every Monday. The Dean of Guild Court is held on the first Tuesday of each month.

Under the provisions of the Reform Act of 1832, Irvine, Ayr and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban in Argyllshire forms the Ayr district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. Irvine burgh is one of great antiquity; the place is mentioned in an account of a dispute at an early period between Sir Ralph de Eglinton and the town of Irvine, and in the 12th century a charter was given to it. During the time of Alexander II. (1214-49) another charter was obtained, and this was confirmed by Robert the Bruce (1306-29). A monastery of Carmelite friars was founded here about 1300. The burgh is lighted by gas supplied by a company from works at Cotton row, and electric light and power are transmitted from a generating station at Townhead. A scheme for supplying the town with water was completed in Aug. 1878, by the authorities of the burgh of Irvine and the parish of Dundonald, at a cost of upwards of £90,000. Arrangements have since been made extending the supply to the towns of Kilwinning, Stevenston and Saltcoats, which by the Irvine Burgh Act, 1881, were included in the water supply district. Under the Irvine and District Water Board Order the control of the water supply is now vested in the Irvine and District Water Board of 17 members, viz.: 7 from Irvine; 3 from Kilwinning, 3 from Stevenston and 4 from Saltcoats; further extensions have since been carried out. The horse fair is held on the third Monday in August, and with this commences the Marymass fair, which extends over the week and ends on Saturday with the races, conducted by the Irvine Carters' Society, the magistrates acting as stewards. Irvine was a customs port before 1760; its limits were defined and legal quays appointed in 1851, and in 1892 it was reinstated by Treasury warrant as a port of the United Kingdom. The number of sailing and steam vessels that arrived at the port in the coasting trade with cargoes and in ballast in 1918 was 406 of 39,222 tons; the number that departed was 428, of 40,024 tons; in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 245 vessels of 21,335 tons arrived with cargoes and in ballast, and 219 of 20,224 tonnage departed. The total value of the imports in 1919 was £12,000, and of exports £11,470.

The Ayrshire Dockyard Co. Limited have a shipbuilding yard here, covering 20 acres. The grain and forage stores of Messrs. Longmuir and Hunter were established here in 1820. Here are a steam saw mill, an iron forge, two large engineering and foundry yards, hosiery manufactories and spelter works. Important chemical and chrome works have also been erected near the beach, which give employment to nearly 1,000 men, and the shipbuilding and repair work of the Ayrshire Dockyard Co. Limited to as many. There are branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank Limited, British Linen Bank, Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Of the hotels and inns the King's Arms, in High street, is the principal. The Municipal buildings form an elegant structure, surmounted by a turret with spire and containing a clock; the interior contains a council chamber, court house and various offices. The parish church is a building of large dimensions, with a spire and clock, and stands on rising ground in the centre of a churchyard; there is also the quoad sacra church of Fullarton, four United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, a Baptist chapel, Salvation Army barracks and several Mission halls. The Irvine Royal Academy, at the north end of the town, a Secondary school and Junior Students' Centre, was a pre-Reformation school and was endowed by King James VI. rebuilt in 1816, and then re-established by a royal charter; in 1902 the premises were rebuilt at a cost of £19,000; attached to the Academy are several valuable bursaries. There are also Public Elementary and Catholic schools. The Literary and Social Institute, in Bridgegate, has reading and recreation rooms, and a large hall for public meetings and entertainments. There are Templars' and Orange Halls. The statue of Robert Burns, who was born near Ayr, 25 January, 1759, but for some time worked at Irvine as a flax dresser, is a colossal figure of bronze, modelled by Mr. Pittendrigh Macgillivray A.R.S.A. and presented to the town of Irvine by Mr. John Spiers; the pedestal is ornamented with bronze panels displaying scenes from the poet's works. James Montgomery, a minor poet, some time editor of the "Sheffield Iris," and author of "The World before the Flood," the well-known hymn on "Prayer," and many other sacred poems, was born here, 4th Nov. 1771, in a small one-storey house, still standing in the street leading to the railway station, which has been purchased by some members of the Irvine Burns club with the view of preserving it. A tablet has been placed on the building, marking it as the birthplace of Montgomery. He visited his native town in 1841, and died at Sheffield, 30 April, 1854, and was buried in the general cemetery, where there is a monument with a statue in bronze, erected in 1861, at a cost of £1,000. John Galt, author of the "Annals of the Parish," &c. was born at Irvine, 2nd May, 1779; the house occupied by his father's family was taken down in 1858 and the office of the Union Bank erected on its site; a tablet in the Bank office, and a medallion portrait in bronze, built in the exterior wall, and the gift of the late James Dickie, formerly town clerk, commemorate this circumstance. The screw propeller, the principle of which was shown by Robert Hooke F.R.S. in 1681, and later by Du Quet, Bernoulli and others, was developed here in 1824 or 1825 by Messrs. W. M'Crirrick, Maxwell Dick, and James Steadman, and successfully applied in 1836 by Fras. Pettet Smith and Capt. John Ericsson. The sect called Buchanites was founded here in 1779 by one Mrs. Elizabeth Buchan, who pretended to be the woman mentioned in Rev. ch. xii., and gathered many followers, with whom she journeyed through different parts of Scotland; she died in May, 1791, and the sect was then dispersed. From 1618 to 1640 Irvine was the scene of the labours of David Dickson M.A. afterwards professor of divinity at Glasgow University. On the 31st December, 1666, Blackwood and M'Coul, two Covenanters, were hanged at Irvine. The Marymass races are customarily held on the Saturday following the third Monday of August, and the Eglinton Hunt meeting (over the Bogside course) generally in the beginning of April. There are golf links near the town; the links at Bogside, with a club house, municipal links and two others at Gailes belonging to Glasgow clubs. A commodious club house has been erected for the Irvine Golf Club at Bogside, at a cost of upwards of £4,000. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, stands within 2 miles of the burgh, and is famous as the scene of the grand tournament held here 29 August, 1839, and the following week; admission to the grounds and gardens (on saturdays only) is obtainable by ticket. The area of the parish is 3,954 acres; rateable value, £42,990. The population in 1911, including 392 patients (including 91 in the lunatic wards) and 39 officials and their families, in the Cunningham Combination Poorhouse, was 6,795. The area of the burgh is 1,795 acres; rateable value £61,843. The population of the royal and parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 10,179, viz.:—Irvine parish, 4,944; Dundonald parish, 5,235. The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 1,528; Second, 1,605; Third, 1,811; Fourth, 1,425; Fifth, 1,683; Sixth, 2,127 (including 68 shipping). The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 6,382. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1919 was 4,961.

FULLARTON is a quoad sacra parish. The population in 1911 was 5,235.

KILBIRNIE

KILBIRNIE, or Kilburney, is a populous town and parish, in Cunninghame district and poor combination, and in the small debts court district of Beith; 64 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 20 south-south-west of Glasgow, the like distance north of Ayr and 3 west from Beith; it is 1¼ north-east from Glengarnock and Kilbirnie station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and there are also convenient stations at Bridgend (Kilbirnie, the terminus of a short line from Giffen) and at Glengarnock, both on the Caledonian system. The town is situated on the banks of the Garnock, in the heart of a fine country, and within a mile of the loch of Kilbirnie, which extends two miles in length by a half a mile in breadth. The principal manufactories are the flax spinning, linen thread, and fishing-net works of Messrs. W. and J. Knox Limited, and there are also iron and steel works, and the rope works of Messrs. Robertson and Riddet, and J. Watt and Sons Limited. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited. The parish church is a plain edifice, but contains some fine examples of elaborate carving in wood. The gallery in the Crawfurd aisle, a perfect mass of beautiful carved work, is supposed to have been executed by the orders of John (Lindsay-Crawfurd), 1st Viscount Garnock (d. 1709), the quartered escutcheon of whose arms impaled with those of his wife, Margaret (only daughter of John, first Earl of Bute), appear along its front; this gallery, for some time in a state of decay, has been restored by Sir James Knox bt. of Kilbirnie Castle. In the churchyard is the stately tomb of Captain Thomas Crawfurd, of Jordanhill, whose capture of Dumbarton Castle, in 1571, is one of the most daring feats recorded in history. There are also two United Free churches here and one at Glengarnock, and a Roman Catholic church. The Cemetery, covering four acres, was laid out at a cost of £2,700. The old castle of Glengarnock, one of the most ancient and stately ruins in Ayrshire, is supposed to have been the residence of the family of De Morville, which flourished in great splendour during the reigns of Alexander I., David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion. They held the high office of constable of Scotland, and were lords of Galloway and Cunninghame. There likewise exist the extensive ruins of the old house of Kilbirnie, long the residence of the ancient family of Crawfurd, of Kilbirnie; but the Kilbirnie estates are now chiefly held by the Knox family. The parish of Kilbirnie comprises 10,370 acres; rateable value, £54,969; and had in 1911 a population of 7,618; of this number the town ward contained 4,651 and Glengarnock 2,967.

WEST KILBRIDE

WEST KILBRIDE is a parish and village in Cunninghame district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; 73 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 24 south-south-west from Paisley, the like distance north-north-west from Ayr, 22 south from Greenock, 19 north-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-west from Irvine, 7½ south from Largs, 7 south-west from Dalry, 5 north from Saltcoats, 4½ south from Fairlie, and 4 north-west from Ardrossan; the village is surrounded on all sides by rising grounds, which on the west protect it from the keen sea breezes, and on the opposite aspect from easterly winds. The village is lighted with gas by a company. The scenery around is bold and romantic. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited; there is also a Public Institute, Library and Reading Room, the Paisley Convalescent Home, and Bowling, Curling and Golf Clubs. In the parish is an Established church, a Roman Catholic and two United Free churches and a Parochial Cemetery. Near the village are the ruins of Law Castle, Portencross Castle and Hunterston Castle, and off the sea line of the parish one of the largest vessels of the Spanish Armada still remains sunk in ten fathoms of water. An attempt was made about a century ago to examine the internal condition of this ship, and the operation so far succeeded that a piece of Ordnance was raised from her hulk. Hunterston, situated in extensive grounds, is the seat of Lieut.-General Sir Aylmer Hunter-Weston K.C.B., D.S.O., M.P. The principal landowners are Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie, Mrs. Jane Hunter-Weston, the trustees of the late Henry C. Hyndman esq. William Graham esq. J.P. William Adams esq. J.P. and the trustees of the late James Arthur esq. of Carlung. Area, 10,178 acres; rateable value, £36,946; population in 1911, 3,164 in the civil parish, and 3,067 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 13 were in Buteshire.

SEAMILL, a small village on the sea shore, less than 1 mile from West Kilbride, is a delightful summer resort and has a hydropathic establishment, known as the Seamill Hydropathic Limited; there is also here a Co-operative Convalescent Home and a golf course.

KILMARNOCK

KILMARNOCK is a large and important manufacturing town and a parish, in Cuninghame district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 65½ miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Glasgow), 21 south-west from Glasgow, 12 north-by-east from Ayr and between 6 and 7 east-by-north from Irvine. The town is situated on level ground near the confluence of the Kilmarnock water with the Irvine. The streets are regularly laid out and lighted with gas from works the property of the Corporation, and also with the electric light, the supply of which began 5 Nov. 1904, under an order granted to the Corporation in 1899. This town, together with Dumbarton, Port Glasgow, Renfrew and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member to Parliament. The civil government of the town is vested in a Corporation, consisting of a provost, six bailies and eighteen councillors. The magistrates preside in the criminal court by turns, and the justices sit monthly. For years Kilmarnock seems to have been distinguished only for the manufacture of Scotch bonnets and military caps. Subsequently the staple manufacture was that of carpets, and this is still carried on. An extensive trade is also maintained in the manufacture of shoes for exportation, tweeds, wincyes and cotton goods; there are skin works and tanneries and woollen and worsted spinning is also pursued, but the iron trade may now be said to be the staple trade of the town, and there are many large machine making and iron founding establishments, including the Caledonia works of Messrs. Andrew Barclay, Sons and Co. Limited, and others. The production of porcelain, enamelled and all kinds of fire clay goods, sanitary earthenware and glazed wall tiles is also extensively carried on here. Glenfield and Kennedy Limited, hydraulic engineers, have also a large factory, and here also are the engineering works of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Surrounding the town are extensive coal fields, from which the various works in the town are supplied, and quantities of coal are also dispatched by railway. The civil parish of Kilmarnock consists ecclesiastically of four parishes—the Low, the High, formed in 1731, St. Marnock's, and St. Andrew's, each containing an Established church. Part of the steeple of the Laigh kirk is of considerable age. St. Marnock's church, erected at a cost of £5,000, is a large and handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a tower, and affords sittings for 1,300 persons. The United Free church has 10 places of worship in the town, one in the village of Crookedholm, in this parish, and a Mission hall in Gilmour street. There are also Roman Catholic, Baptist and Congregational chapels, and places of worship for various other denominations. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity will seat 300 persons; the Rev. Canon Alban Francis Blood has been rector since 1889. The old parish churchyard and that of St. Andrew's are now closed, but a public cemetery, covering seven acres of ground, was opened in 1875, and enlarged in 1892. The Town House, built in 1805, contains a council chamber and public offices. The Court House, in St. Marnock street, was erected in 1852, and attached to it are the sheriff's chambers, the offices of the procurator fiscal, those of the sheriff clerk and other offices. The Police buildings, in Sturrock street, were erected in 1898, at a cost of about £3,000, and contain a spacious court room and two flats of cells. The Public Library and Museum, in Elmbank avenue, London road, known as the "Dick Institute," was begun in 1899, and formally opened in April, 1901, the total cost, amounting to £15,000, being defrayed by James Dick esq. of Glasgow: the building is in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect: the ground floor is occupied by the reading rooms, lending and reference library and a spacious lecture hall, capable of seating 400 persons: on the second floor are the museums, containing the valuable geological collection of the late Mr. James Thompson F.G.S. and a large portion of the Braidwood collection, left by the late Dr. Hunter Selkirk; the late Mr. George Clark also bequeathed £500 to the library and museum, and the revenue from the trust funds of the late Mr. Robert Crawford amounts to about £80 per annum. The building, which was partially destroyed by fire on 26th Nov. 1909, was reconstructed in 1911, with an extension of the museum. The Philosophical Society was formed in 1828, for the promotion of general and specially scientific knowledge. The Observatory, which occupies a fine site and is 70 feet in height, was erected in 1818 by the late Mr. Thomas Morton, at a cost of £1,000. There is a good Philharmonic Society. The Liberal Club is in Portland street; the Conservative Club, in Sturrock street, is a fine stone building, in the Italian style, from the designs of Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect, and was erected at a cost of about £1,400: it contains a spacious hall seating 400 people, and billiard, reading and recreation rooms, and was considerably enlarged in 1892, at a cost of £500. The Ossington Temperance Hotel, built by Lady Ossington, a former proprietor of the Barony of Kilmarnock, contains a reading room. There are four Masonic lodges, and others of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, the Free Foresters, the Free Gardeners &c. The Fever Hospital and Dispensary, which occupies an elevated site, is a building of stone, and was opened in 1868, at a cost of £4,146. The premises of the Kilmarnock Equitable Co-operative Society Limited, at the junction of John Finnie and John Dickie streets, were erected at a cost of nearly £20,000.

The Infectious Diseases Hospital was opened in 1909, at a cost of £23,500.

The Buchanan Charity, left in 1875, on the death of the last survivor of the Misses Buchanan of Bellfield, consists, according to a settlement made by the three sisters, of the mansion and estate of Bellfield, bequeathed by them for the benefit of the town of Kilmarnock and the village of Riccarton, close to which the estate, consisting of 240 acres, is situated. The trust provides £5 yearly to the Certified Industrial School; £3 to Kilmarnock Infirmary; £10 to the parish minister of Riccarton, to be expended on flannel for deserving poor; £130 yearly as salary to a missionary for Riccarton parish, and the balance of the yearly rents from lands and minerals is handed to the ministers of the Established Church to be divided by them amongst the poor of the two parishes. Part of the mansion is fitted up to contain a reference library, now of about 1,500 volumes, for the public of Kilmarnock and Riccarton, and the gardens and policies are open for recreation. In accordance with the terms of the bequest the estate and funds are now administered by the provost and magistrates of Kilmarnock, the Established Church clergymen of the town and the minister of Riccarton. The mansion and grounds are open to the public every week day and part of Sunday.

The Shaw Memorial, at the Market cross, was erected in 1848 to the late Sir James Shaw bart. Lord Mayor of London 1805-6, and a native of Mosshead, in this neighbourhood, who was born in 1764, and died 22 Oct. 1843. The memorial consists of a marble statue by James Fillans, a Scottish sculptor, and is eight feet in height, in civic robes, on a pedestal of the same height.

The Kilmarnock Academy, for 1,000 boys and girls, erected in 1897-8 by the School Board, at a cost of fully £25,000, was designed by Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect; the buildings include chemical and physical laboratories, a gymnasium, a workshop for manual instruction and a swimming bath. James Clark M.A., D.Sc. is the rector. In connection with the Academy a Technical School was erected in 1909, at a total cost of over £25,000, from the designs of Messrs. Andrew and Newlands: the building contains separate laboratories for chemistry, physics, electrical engineering, mechanics, hydraulics, mechanical engineering, mining, textile industries and biology, together with rooms for classes in cookery and laundry work. There are also rooms for the study of art, machine drawing, geometry and building construction. James Clark M.A., D.Sc. is the director. Kay's Endowed Schools, in Bentinck street, now known as "Bentinck Public School," were founded by Alexander Kay, a native of Kilmarnock, who left the sum of £6,000 for their building and endowment; they have been transferred to the School Board, under a scheme of the Endowed School Commissioners, and the interest of the endowment is applied to educational purposes.

The Kay Park owes its existence to the late Mr. Alexander Kay, of Glasgow, and a native of Kilmarnock, who died in Jan. 1866, and by his will left £10,000 to purchase grounds for a public park and to maintain the same, and in 1878 the present site, consisting of nearly forty acres, was purchased from the Duke of Portland at a cost of £9,000. It includes the Clerk's Holm, and stretches from Braehead House to the Townhead bridge, and from the river on the west to Grassyards road on the east. A sum of about £3,000 was spent in laying out the park and forming drives and walks. In the centre of the Clerk's Holm is an ornamental fountain, erected at a cost of £800, and by a gift of the late Mrs. James Crooks a band-stand has also been erected, and a band plays here on Saturday afternoons. The park was publicly handed over to the burgh council, 9 Aug. 1879, and there is a limited fund for its maintenance. In 1882 the council purchased Strawberry Bank, an adjoining property, consisting of eight acres, for £1,800, and this has been incorporated with the Kay Park; portions of both are reserved for feuing purposes, and there is a small ornamental lake. In this section of the park stands a monument erected in honour of the early parliamentary reformers. The Burns' Memorial, which stands in the park, was initiated at the public anniversary of the poet, held Jan. 26th, 1877, and consists of a museum and library, within which is placed a statue of Burns; the building, erected in 1878-9, is in the Scottish baronial style, from designs by Mr. S. Ingram, architect, of Kilmarnock, and has a height of 80 feet. The statue, of Sicilian marble, was executed by Mr. W. G. Stevenson, Edinburgh, and cost £800. The entire cost of the building and statue was about £2,700. The collection of Burns' holograph MSS. preserved here is the most complete in existence, and includes the MSS. of many of his best known poems, besides many of his letters to correspondents in Kilmarnock and the neighbourhood, and other relics, including china, plate, silver spoons, glass and a chair. The Mackie Library, also kept here, contains almost every published edition of the poet's works, and comprises upwards of 800 volumes.

Dean Castle, formerly the property of the Boyds, Earls of Kilmarnock, but destroyed by fire in 1735, stands in a dene or hollow less than a mile north from the town; the castle was restored in 1915. Kilmarnock House, a mansion once belonging to and the last residence of that noble family, is in St. Marnock street. From this house William Boyd, 4th and last earl, proceeded in 1745 to join the standard of the Pretender, but was taken prisoner at Culloden, and executed on Tower Hill, 18 Aug. 1746. His eldest son, James, Lord Boyd, subsequently succeeded in 1758 to the earldom of Errol, and his descendant William George, 17th Earl of Errol K.T., G.C.H. was in 1831 (17 June) created a peer of the United Kingdom under the title of Baron Kilmarnock. About 3 miles from the town, on the Carmel, is Rowallan Castle, a fortress of considerable antiquity, though greatly decayed. It was the seat of the barons of Rowallan, and is famous as the birthplace of Elizabeth More, or Mure, the first wife of Robert the Second and mother of Robert III. of Scotland. It was also the residence of Sir William Mure, author of a metrical translation of the Psalms of David, and other poetical works. The estate now belongs to the Hon. T. Godfrey Polson Corbett M.C.

The market, which is held on Friday, is abundantly supplied. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, the last Thursday in July (commonly called the "grozet fair"), and for horses on the last Thursday in October. The cheese show and fair, held at the end of October, is affirmed to be the largest in the kingdom, and is attended by dealers from all parts of the country; 15,000 tons of cheese have been exhibited here at one show. The October show is purely an agricultural one. About the middle of April a large show of cattle, horses and sheep has been held for years. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. Lord Howard de Walden and Lord Rowallan are the principal landowners.

The area of the civil parish comprises 9,439 acres; rateable value in 1921, £205,444, inclusive of railways; the population of the entire parish was 33,142 in 1901, and in 1911, 33,817, of which 1,889 was landward. Included in the total population were 129 patients and 38 officials in the Infirmary, 95 in the Industrial School, and 141 inmates and 12 officials in Nazareth House. The population of the municipal borough in 1911 was 34,728, of which 2,800 was in Riccarton parish. As showing the progress of the town, it may be mentioned that in 1801 the population of the parish was only 8,079. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Kilmarnock (Old), 12,482; High Kirk, 3,716; St. Andrew, 8,913; St. Marnock, 5,314. The parliamentary burgh had in 1911 a population of 31,553 in Kilmarnock parish and 2,800 in Riccarton parish; total, 34,358. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 16,491.

CROOKEDHOLM is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmarnock, and has a parish church and a United Free church. Hurlford, on the Kilmarnock and Darvel section of the Glasgow and South Western system, is the nearest railway station, and is half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

KILMAURS is a town and burgh of barony and parish in Cunninghame district and poorhouse combination and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway. The town is 2½ miles north-west from Kilmarnock, and stands on the right bank of a rivulet called the Carmel or Kilmaurs water. It was erected into a burgh or barony in 1527 by James V. at the instance of Cuthbert, 3rd Earl of Glencairn, and his son, Lord Kilmaurs. The town, which consists principally of a single street, is lighted with gas. The most prominent trade now is the manufacture of boots and shoes and hosiery. Coal is also raised in the parish. The Established church has been thoroughly restored, and a new chancel and tower erected at a cost of about £2,000, defrayed by the heritors and members of the congregation. In the churchyard is a fine tomb to James (Cunynghame), Lord Kilmaurs and 7th Earl of Glencairn, and his family. There are also two United Free churches. The Town House, a small edifice with a tower and clock, stands in the middle of the street. The Public Hall, erected at a cost of about £1,500, is used for meetings and entertainments. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. Lord Howard de Walden, Lieut.-Col. Hugh Robert Wallace D.S.O., D.L., J.P. Col. William Pollok-Morris C.M.G., D.S.O., D.L., J.P. George Edward B. Wrey esq. and Lady Sophia C. Montgomerie are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,914 acres; rateable value, £31,323; the population in 1911 was 4,349 in the civil and 1,966 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CROSSHOUSE is a small village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Kilmaurs and Dreghorn, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, about 1 mile distant from the village. The collieries and fire-clay works in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of the inhabitants. There are Established and Roman Catholic churches here, and Board and Roman Catholic schools. Population in 1911, 2,630 in the ecclesiastical parish.

GATEHEAD is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmaurs, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock and 4 south from Kilmaurs, with a station on the Ayr branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The population is returned with the parish.

ELDERSLIE, FARDLEHILL, and KELK PLACE are villages in the parish.

KILWINNING is a market town, police burgh and parish, in Cunninghame poorhouse combination and Irvine small debt court district. The town is situated on rising ground about 2 miles from the sea, and is 24 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, 3 north-west of Irvine, 4 north-east of Saltcoats, the same distance south of Dalry, 10 west-north-west of Kilmarnock and 5 east from Ardrossan, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways; the branch of the Lanark-shire and Ayrshire railway, from Barmill to Ardrossan, was completed in the summer of 1888, the station being close to that on the Glasgow and South Western line. The town is lighted with gas by the Kilwinning Gas Co. Limited, and supplied with water by the Irvine and District Water Board from their works at Dalry, and is governed by a provost and one senior and three junior magistrates, having been constituted a police burgh in Nov. 1889. The trade formerly consisted partly in the weaving and manufacture of gauzes, muslins and shawls for the Glasgow and Paisley markets; and in the neighbourhood are large iron, coal and fire-clay works. Several engineering works, an iron foundry, and a worsted spinning mill are also carried on. The agricultural produce of the parish is considerable, and coals are obtained in abundance. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. Kilwinning (Joint) Hospital, in Fergushill road, completed and opened in 1897, is available for 36 patients; Miss Jessie M. Grant, matron. The Established church, a mean edifice, has, however, an elegant tower of four stages, in the Early English style, erected at a cost of £2,000, with embattled parapet and pinnacles, and contains a clock with dials. There are also two United Free churches, and chapels belonging to the Congregational Union, Original Seceders and Roman Catholics. The Board school, built at a cost of £10,000, will hold about 1,000 children. The picturesque ruins of the ancient abbey, founded by Hugh de Morville, in 1140, adjoin the church, but consist of little more than the gable of the south transept, a lofty fragment in the Lancet style, and an arch once leading into the nave. The public park, in Dalry road, was formed with a sum of £7,000, bequeathed by the late John M'Gavin esq. formerly of Kilwinning. The Small Pox Hospital, erected in 1908, contains 20 beds.

Kilwinning is famous as being the first place in Scotland where freemasonry was established, and it is traditionally said to have been introduced by the foreign architect who was employed in erecting the abbey. Until the period of the Reformation the ancient masonic lodge here held its meetings in the chapter house of the monastery, but in 1779 a lodge was built in a plain Gothic style, and continued to be used until 1893, when it was removed for the purpose of making a new entrance to the churchyard. The new lodge, erected and opened in the same year, stands in the main street, a short distance west of the old site, and is a good building of red Mauchline stone, the design being a free treatment of Scottish Renaissance style, by Mr. J. B. Wilson, architect, Glasgow. The main entrance door is semi-circular, with pilasters at each side, and a balustraded balcony above. The upper floor is lighted by a wide bay window in five divisions, and above it is a typical Scotch gable, with the usual corbie steps, and across it runs a carved frieze bearing the words "Mother Lodge." The large upper room, 24 feet by 20 feet, is used for meetings of the lodge, and there are several small rooms and an entrance hall. The ceiling is ornamented with wreaths of thistles, with various masonic emblems interlaced. It is also remarkable from being the seat of a company of archers ascertained to have existed so early as the year 1448: and a society of that kind is still in existence. Fairs are held on the first Monday in February and the first Monday in November; and a cattle show in connection with the Farmers' Society is held annually. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, is famous as the scene of the tournament held there Aug. 29, 1839, and the following week. Here are the kennels of the Eglinton foxhounds, of which the Earl of Eglinton and Winton is master; the pack hunts 4 days a week; Ayr, Kilmarnock and Irvine are convenient places for hunting visitors. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton, Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie and Sir James Bell bart. C.B., D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The population in 1911 was 8,411, of which 4,945 belonged to the burgh; area of the parish, 10,998 acres; area of burgh, 417 acres; rateable value, of landward, £38,264; burghal, £19,755.

Eglinton Iron Works, Fergushill (which see), and Bensley are villages in this parish.

KIRKMICHAEL is a small village and parish in the district of Carrick and in Maybole poor combination. The village is 3½ miles east from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 76 south-west from Edinburgh, 22 south from Kilmarnock, 10 south of Ayr, the same distance east of Dalmellington, 8 north-east of Dailly and 4 west-by-north from Straiton, pleasantly situated in a valley, on the road from Newton Stewart to Glasgow, and is 36 miles from the former and 44 from the latter. The general surface of the parish is hilly, rowards the south and east mountainous and rocky; but the whole is more or less cultivated. The Girvan stream runs through the parish; the Doon forms its boundary for several miles, and the Dyrock water flows through the village. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Michael, and the present structure was built in 1787 on the old site. In the churchyard is the tomb of Gilbert M'Adam, who was shot in 1685 by the laird of Culzean and Ballochmyle, for his adherence to the Covenanters. Here is a public hall and reading room. Cloncaird Castle, an ancient building, is the residence of Lt.-Col. Hugh Robert Wallace D.S.O., D.L., J.P. Area of the parish, 15,929 acres; rateable value, £15,800 0s. 7d. Population in 1911, 1,699 in the civil and 807 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CROSSHILL is a village on the left bank of the Girvan, in the parish, and about 2 miles south of Kirkmichael, and is a quoad sacra parish, formed from Kirkmichael, Kirkoswald and Maybole parishes. There are Established and United Free churches here. Population in 1911, 1,040 in the ecclesiastical parish and 621 in the village.

KIRKOSWALD is a parish in the district of Carrick and in Maybole poor combination. The village is 13 miles south-west from Ayr and 4½ south-east from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and on the road from Portpatrick to Glasgow, being 90 miles from the former and 48 by the new road from the latter. The sea coast here presents a sandy beach with a rich sward extending to the sea mark; and there are two lakes, from which many small streams wind through the district towards the sea. The strip of shoreland is given up to potato growing, which, within the past twenty years, has proved a very lucrative business. Here are Established and United Free churches, a Public School, a Working Men's Club and a Mission Hall. Culzean Castle, the seat of the Marquess of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor, is a fine and ancient mansion placed on a rock overhanging the sea; and on the land side are gardens and a noble park of great extent. At Crossraguel, in a low valley between Kirkoswald and Maybole, are the remains of the abbey of St. Mary, founded in 1244, by Duncan, first Earl of Carrick, and at one period inhabited by Cluniac monks from Paisley. At the Reformation it became the property of the Earl of Cassillis, but now belongs to Col. John G. Sturrock. A lighthouse stands on the site of Turnberry Castle, once the residence and property of Robert the Bruce, and not more than a mile from it lies the farm of Shanter, once the residence of Douglas Graham, the hero of Burns' poem, "Tam o' Shanter," and now occupied by Mr. William Gray. Area of the parish comprises 14,849 acres; gross rateable value, £18,128; the population in 1911 was 1,685 in the civil and 1,535 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LARGS is a town, police burgh and watering place on the east shore of the Firth of Clyde, opposite the north end of Great Cumbrae Island, and as a parish is at the extreme north-west of the county, extending 8 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded north and east by Renfrewshire, south by West Kilbride parish and west by the Firth and is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The town is 70 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 14 south from Greenock and 20 north from Irvine, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The town is governed by a provost and town councillors. In 1263 Haco, King of Norway, was defeated by the Scottish Army under Alexander III. on the plain on which the town stands. The parish church is an edifice of red stone, with a spire and clock. There are two United Free churches, one of which, the Clark Memorial church, was erected by John Clark esq. J.P. at a cost of £30,000: there is also a Roman Catholic church, a Mission hall and a hall for Christian Brethren. The Episcopal church of St. Columba was built in 1877, and will seat 250 persons. An aisle in the old parish church, built by Sir Robert Montgomerie, in 1636, is the burial place of the Montgomeries, of Skelmorlie, and has underneath a vault in which lies the body of Sir Robert, inclosed in a leaden coffin bearing a Latin inscription. The Rev. Frederick Charles Moir M.A. of Selwyn College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1921. The cemetery is in Hailie road. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Bank. Considerable business is carried on in the fishery. The annual fair, commencing on the first Tuesday in June after the 12th (St. Columbus's day), lasts two days. At Mackerston place is a granite fountain, erected as a memorial to the late John Campbell, surgeon, for 61 years a resident of the town. The old buildings of the Brisbane Academy, purchased by J. Stevenson esq. of Hailie, have been converted into an institute, with reading and recreation rooms and a library, which also includes the Mechanics' Library, increased by gifts of books from Mr. Stevenson. Knock Castle, the seat of John Dunn esq. occupies a fine position overlooking the Firth, and is a conspicuous landmark: in the grounds are the ruins of the old castle. Brisbane is the seat of Miss St. Aubyn Brisbane; Netherhall, of James Thomson Bottomley LL.D., F.R.S.; Halkshill, of Mrs. Scott, and Hailie, of Mrs. Brisbane. The area of the parish comprises 21,848 acres; area of burgh, 353 acres; rateable value, landward, £27,984; burghal, £44,429; the population in 1911 was 6,029, of which 3,724 are in the burgh. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 4,049.

LOUDOUN is a parish in the north-east of the county, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The parish lies 4½ miles south-east of Kilmarnock and 15 north-east from Ayr and the nearest station is at Newmilns, on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish extends 10 miles from east to west by 3 in breadth, and is bounded east by Lanarkshire, north by Renfrewshire and the parish of Fenwick, west by Kilmarnock and south by Galston. The chancel of the old parish kirk of Loudoun, originally built about 1015, and the only part now remaining, stands near the castle, and is used as the burying place of the family of Hastings, and here rest the remains of Lady Flora Hastings, to whose memory, and that of her mother, a granite obelisk was erected in 1888, by a near relative, Miss Henry, of Cheltenham. In the parish is also Pate's Mill, celebrated in the song, "The Lass of Pate's Mill." Loudoun Castle, the property of the Countess of Loudoun, is a large structure in the Baronial style, standing in the midst of an extensive and well-wooded park. The Countess of Loudoun is the principal landowner. The area comprises 15,511 acres; rateable value, £49,467; the population in 1911, including parts of Darvel, Galston and Newmilns burghs, was 8,973, and exclusive, 1,042. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 5,213. The post offices are at Newmilns, Darvel and Galston, and the places of worship, Established and United Free church, are in the same towns.

MAUCHLINE

MAUCHLINE is a considerable town and parish in Kyle poor combination, 2½ miles west from Catrine, with a station, less than half a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South Western railway: the town is pleasantly situated and lighted with gas by a company. The Established church, erected in place of the old kirk, the scene of the "Holy Fair," is an elegant structure in the Gothic style with a square tower, and there are also United Free churches. In connection with the Established church an elegant and spacious church hall was erected about 1899. In the churchyard are the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld, Nanse Tinnock, Mary Morrison and several other persons who figure in the satires of Burns. The new cemetery is near the railway station. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Public Library and a Temperance Hall. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after the 18th May and the 4th of November. The trade consists chiefly in the manufacture of fancy woodware &c. Messrs. T. and A. Kay have a wide reputation for the manufacture of curling stones. The red freestone quarries of Ballochmyle and Barskimming provide employment for many of the inhabitants. Mauchline Castle is an ancient structure of considerable antiquarian interest. Burns resided several years at Mossgiel, a small farm about half a mile to the north of Mauchline, on the left side of the road from thence to Kilmarnock; the steading may still be seen, environed by a few trees, as well as the fields, in traversing which, it is said, he composed some of his best poems. His chief resort when he visited Mauchline was the public house of John Dow, a thatched house of two flats, nearly opposite the churchyard gate, now entirely rebuilt and occupied as houses and shops. The cottage of "Poosie Nancy," or Mrs. Gibson, the scene of the "Jolly Beggars," stands immediately opposite the churchyard gate. The National Burns Memorial, erected here in 1898, is a square tower, used as a museum for relics of the poet, with cottage homes adjoining; the cost, about £5,000, was raised by public subscription. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Sir Claud Alexander bart.; the Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O.; the trustees of the late John Meikle esq.; the trustees of the late Lady Jane Boswell, and Mrs. Hamilton-Campbell. The area comprises 8,917 acres; rateable value in 1915, £20,016; the population in 1911 was 2,441.

MAYBOLE

MAYBOLE is a parish, police burgh and the head of a poor combination, in the district of Carrick, with a station on the Ayr and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 25 miles north from Ballantrae, 22 south-by-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-by-east from Girvan and 9 south from Ayr. The town, which is the ancient capital of Carrick, is beautifully situated near the coast of the Firth of Clyde. It is lighted with gas by a limited company, and is governed by a town council. The principal industry is the manufacture of boots and shoes, and there are also agricultural implement works. The ancient collegiate church has been for some time in ruins, but the burial ground is still used. The parish church is in Cassillis road; there is also a quoad sacra church at Maybole West, besides two United Free churches, the Episcopal Mission church of St. Oswald, built in 1883 and seating 118 persons, Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels and a Presbyterian Evangelistic hall. The town hall, erected in 1887 by public subscription, is a handsome structure, and supersedes the old building, once belonging to the Kennedys of Blairquhan. The Carnegie Public Library, built at a cost of £4,500, was opened December, 1906. There is a bowling club and a coffee and reading room. The Carrick Farmers' Society holds its meetings here. The old mansion house or castle of the Kennedy family, Marquesses of Ailsa and Earls of Cassillis, is the finest surviving specimen of the various mansions formerly existing in Maybole. It is a stately, well-built structure, standing in the centre of the town, and is now occupied by Thomas Smith esq. factor to the Marquess of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Marquess of Ailsa, Gen. Sir Charles Fergusson bart. K.C.B., K.C.M.G., M.V.O., D.S.O. and William Baird esq. In the vicinity are the celebrated ruins known as "Crossraguel." The area of the parish is 21,932 acres; area of burgh, 392 acres; rateable value of landward, £29,104; burghal, £17,213; the population in 1911 was 6,904, with 4,889 in the town, and including 36 inmates and 3 officials in Maybole Combination Poorhouse; population of ecclesiastical parish, 3,256.

CULROY, or Minishant, is a small village in the parish of Maybole, 3½ miles from that town, and on the road to Ayr, from which it is 5½ miles distant. In this village is a manufactory for woollen goods. The church was erected by the late Sir Peter Coats, in memory of his wife, who died 21st April, 1877, and attached is a reading room and library.

DUNURE, or Fisherton, is a small village and quoad sacra parish, in the parish of Maybole, 6¾ miles from the town, with an Established church, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. Near the village are the ruins of Dunure Castle, the ancient seat of the Kennedys, who have now removed their residence to Culzean. The population of the quoad sacra parish of Fisherton in 1911 was 547.

MUIRKIRK is a parish and town in Kyle district and poor combination, and in Old Cumnock small debt court district, with a station near the town, on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways; the town is 50 miles west-southwest from Edinburgh, 30 south from Glasgow, 26 east-by-north from Ayr, 24 south-east from Kilmarnock and 16 north-west from Sanquhar, near the right bank of the Water of Ayr, and at the junction of the roads leading from Glasgow to Dumfries, and from Edinburgh to Ayr. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and has an Established church, a United Free church and Roman Catholic and Evangelical Union churches. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The Baird Institute, opened in Nov. 1887, was the gift to the town of J. G. A. Baird esq. D.L., J.P. and is a building in the Domestic Gothic style, consisting of reading, recreation and billiard rooms, and a library &c.; the total cost was over £2,000. There is also a Temperance Hall. Fairs are held for hiring on the first Tuesday after the 18th February and the first Thursday after the 18th December, and for pleasure &c. on the second Friday in June. A considerable portion of the land here is profitably employed in grazing and pasture. The pasture land ranges from 500 to 2,000 feet above the sea level and produces a celebrated breed of black-faced sheep and Ayrshire cattle, and also contains extensive grouse moors. Coal, iron and limestone are abundant. Messrs. William Baird and Co. Limited have three blast furnaces constantly in operation, for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron, besides extensive works for the manufacture of chemicals. The principal landowners are Miss E. C. B. Baird, the trustees of the late Charles Howatson, Mrs. Carleton Tufnell and the trustees of Sir Windham Frederick Carmichael-Anstruther bart. who is a minor. Area, 30,263 acres; rateable value, £27,023, including railways; population in 1911, 4,982 in the civil and 4,254 in the ecclesiastical parish.

NEWMILNS is a manufacturing town situated on the river Irvine, in the parishes of Loudoun and Galston, 2 miles east of Galston, 24 south of Glasgow and 18 north-east of Ayr, with a station on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is (with Greenholm) a burgh in the joint combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. It was first created a burgh of barony in 1490 by King James IV. and this charter was confirmed by Sir Matthew Campbell, of Loudoun, in 1595. The bailies are competent to hold courts, from which there is no appeal, except to the court of session, and in other respects their jurisdiction is as ample as that of most royal burghs. There is an Established church, and two United Free churches. The Town hall is a substantial building of stone, situated in Main street. The Working Men's Institute was erected by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, and is similar to those at Galston and Darvel. In the centre of the town are the remains of an ancient castle, a former residence of the Hastings family. In 1913 a monument was erected in the churchyard, to the memory of the Scottish Covenanters. The manufacture of muslins and lace is carried on here extensively, a large number of hands being employed in this branch. The area of the burgh is 434 acres; rateable value, £21,159; the population in 1911 was 4,807.

PRESTWICK, or PRESTEVICKE, is a small burgh in Monkton and Prestwick civil parish, and is about 2 miles from Ayr, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date, and reconstituted in November, 1903, and its charter, renewed by James VI. in 1600, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair, but the market has fallen into disuse. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Town House, in which meetings of the Council are held monthly. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists. There are fine golf links, where the ancient game has been played for many years. The Prestwick Golf Club has a large and handsome club house, and there is also the St. Nicholas Club, both having a large number of members. The St. Cuthbert's Links were opened May 5th, 1899. The population in 1901 was 2,766, and in 1911, 4,879.

RICCARTON is a parish and village, in the district of Kyle and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, on the left or south bank of the Irvine river; the village stands on an eminence on the road to Ayr, a mile to the south of Kilmarnock, with which it is connected by a long street and bridge over the river. The parish includes the village of Hurlford. The Established church here was erected in 1823, and has a fine and lofty steeple, and there is also an Institute. In 1919 a three-lighted window was erected in the chancel as a war memorial. Riccarton was once the residence of Sir Richard Wallace, uncle of the Scottish patriot Sir William Wallace, who frequently retired here after his marauding expeditions. Caprington Castle, the residence of Lieut.-Col. J. A. Smith Cuninghame D.L., J.P. is an ancient and historic building. A considerable quantity of coal is raised in this parish. The principal landed proprietors are the Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. Lord Howard de Walden, Lieut.-Col. J. A. Smith Cuninghame D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late Carleton Tufnell esq. Area comprises 7,649 acres; rateable value of landward, £27,999 6s. 5d. and of Kilmarnock portion, £9,958 12s. 2d.; the population in 1911 of the civil parish, exclusive of Kilmarnock and Hurlford portions, was 965, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,722.

SALTCOATS

SALTCOATS is a seaport town and police burgh, partly in the parish of Ardrossan and partly in that of Stevenston, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, and is less than a mile east from Ardrossan and Stevenston, 73 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 29 south-south-west from Glasgow, 19 north from Ayr and 14 west-by-north from Kilmarnock. The town was made a burgh on 25th May, 1885, by the adoption of the General Police Act for Scotland, and is much resorted to in the summer by visitors from all quarters, on account of its facilities for sea bathing. The harbour here was constructed at the beginning of the 18th century, for the shipment of coal brought down by canal from the extensive fields in the immediate neighbourhood. The shipping and ship-building trade of the port has, since 1852, been wholly transferred to the harbour and docks of Ardrossan. The making of salt created at one time a very large trade, but ceased in 1890. Saltcoats is, nevertheless, still a flourishing town. Its close proximity to Ardrossan on the one side with its extensive harbours, docks and public works, and to Stevenston with its foundries on the other, and to the collieries in the neighbourhood, has improved the trade of the town, which has been provided with a thoroughly effective drainage system by the Town Council, and is lighted with gas and supplied with excellent water by a system of gravitation by the Irvine and District Water Board from their works at Dairy. There are two Established churches, an Evangelical Union church, four United Free churches, a Free church, a Roman Catholic church and Salvation Army barracks. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland have branches here. The Town House, in Countess street, was built in 1825; the Town Hall, which adjoins it, erected in 1892, is a building of stone with a clock tower and has a large hall holding 900 persons, and a lesser hall holding 300. A justice of the peace court is regularly held here on the first Friday in every month in the lesser hall. The Masonic Temple and Halls are in Bradshaw street. The Cemetery, opened in 1855 by a company, was acquired by the Parochial Board in 1873, and has been twice extended; it now comprises 7½ acres. The Mission Coast House consists of three blocks of buildings, for the free reception and treatment of about 100 inmates, each remaining for a short period; the home is maintained by voluntary subscriptions. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton and R. G. A. Robertson-Cuninghame esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the burgh is 472 acres; rateable value, £46,628; population in 1911, 5,646 in Ardrossan Side and 2,939 in Stevenston Side; total, 8,585.

NORTH CHURCH is a quoad sacra parish formed Dec. 14, 1906, from Saltcoats and Ardrossan. Population in 1911, 3,349.

STEVENSTON is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde, 2 miles south-east of Ardrossan, the town being 1 mile east of Saltcoats station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways; the parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 1 to 5 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is bounded north by Ardrossan, east by Irvine and Kilwinning and south and west by the Firth. It derives its name from Stephen or Steven, the son of Richard, who obtained a grant of lands from Richard Morville, constable of Scotland, who died in 1189. Under this grant, Stephen settled here, and gave his patronymic designation to the place. Stevenston is supplied with water by the Irvine and District Water Board, from their works at Dalry. The parish abounds in valuable seams of coal. The extensive ironworks of Ardeer were erected here by Messrs. Merry and Cunninghame in 1852, and are still their property. There are also three large foundries here. The Bank of Scotland and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have sub-branches here. The Established church is a large modern building, prominently situated, and there is a Mission church in connection at Ardeer. The old church formerly belonged to the Abbey of Kilwinning. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. At Ardeer is a golf course of 18 holes and 3½ miles in extent. The area of the parish comprises 3,536 acres; rateable value, £55,725; the population in 1901 was 9,148, and in 1911, 10,733, which included 2,983 in the burgh of Saltcoats. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 8,509.

STEWARTON

STEWARTON is a police burgh and parish in the district of Cunninghame, 16 miles south-by-west from Glasgow, 8 north from Irvine, 5½ north from Kilmarnock and 3 north-north-west from Fenwick, and is situated in a pleasant part of the county, on the banks of Annick water, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint railway. The parish, which is about 10 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, and has long been famous for its dairy produce. Stewarton, at one time an inconsiderable and obscure village, is now a manufacturing centre. It is lighted with gas supplied by a private company, and is governed by a provost, two magistrates and six councillors. Here is an Established church, two United Free churches and an Independent church. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Cuninghame Institute, erected at the expense of J. W. H. Cuninghame esq. D.L. has a library and reading and recreation rooms, and large and small halls, besides several committee rooms &c. The hospital here, erected and presented to the burgh by John James Kerr esq. of Robertland, at a cost of about £1,080, was opened in 1895. District Courts for such cases as fall under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace for the parishes of Stewarton, Dunlop and Fenwick are held here. The chief industries of the burgh are hosiery, lace, bonnet making and the manufacture of spindles and flyers. The principal landowners are John William Herbert Cuninghame esq. D.L. William H. Goff, Thomas H. Gollan and Lieut.-Col. Charles Godfrey S. McAlester. The parish comprises 13,635 acres; rateable value, landward, £19,457; burghal, £13,115; the area of the burgh is 148 acres; population in 1911, 3,889, including 2,841 in the burgh; and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,791.

TROON

TROON is a municipal burgh and seaport in the parish of Dundonald, 75 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-west from Glasgow, 7 south from Irvine, 9 south-west from Kilmarnock and about 8 north from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The bay is extensive, and the port also has the advantage of a secure harbour, into which vessels of great burthen can confidently enter with the wind from almost any point. There are two superior dry docks for repairing vessels, large storehouses and a ship-building yard. Under the provisions of Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," 3 vessels, equal to 529 tons register, were registered as belonging to the port, Dec. 31, 1918. In the general coasting trade, 324 vessels arrived in 1918 of 42,463 tons; departed, 219 of 28,390 tons. In the trade between Great Britain and Ireland 442 vessels arrived of 63,488 tonnage; departed, 548 of 75,931 tons. The tonnage and value of the imports in 1919 were 54,755 tons of iron ore of the value of £135,271, 1,062 tons of unmanufactured cork of the value of £20,820. The total value of the exports of the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom was 52,603 tons of coal, coke and patent fuel of the value of £159,834; and all other articles of the value of £6,885. A line of railway from the extremity of the harbour to Kilmarnock conveys coal, thence shipped to Ireland, France &c. This place also affords good boating and sea bathing, and has become one of the most popular and healthy watering places on the west coast, so that in summer the population is nearly trebled. The town is lighted with gas from works now belonging to the Town Council, and waterworks have been provided at a cost of over £70,000, the water being supplied from Loch Braden. The Established church was erected in 1896, and there are the Portland and St. Meddans United Free churches and a Roman Catholic chapel. The British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland have branches here. The Unionist Club, on Temple hill, erected in 1894, is a fine building, containing reading and billiard rooms, and a spacious hall in which entertainments are given. Near the town are golf links with three courses, and a club-house, besides a ladies' golf course and club house; there are also the municipal golf links, with three courses and a club house. The area of the burgh is 833 acres; rateable value, £58,943; the population in 1901 was 4,764 burgh, 5,181 ecclesiastical, and in 1911, burgh 6,638 (including 53 shipping), and 7,172 ecclesiastical.

BARASSIE is a sea bathing village, on the Firth of Clyde, a mile and a half north of Troon, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway.

BANFFSHIRE

THIS county, which is of no great extent, is bounded on the north by the North Sea, on the south and on the east by Aberdeenshire, and on the west by the shires of Elgin and Inverness. Its form is elongated, being 50 miles in extent from north to south, with a border of very irregular outline, but varying much in width, being 15 miles wide at the southern extremity between Benavon and Cairngorm, narrowing to 6 south of Ealasaid hill, and after extending again to 18 between Drummin and Cabrach it narrows to 8 a little south of Keith, northwards of which it extends to 35 miles, which is the length of its sea coast line.

The river Deveron for a considerable distance forms the north-eastern boundary between this county and that of Aberdeen, and enters the sea at Banff; and the Spey, its western, where it marches with Elgin. This district was at one time a component part of the province of Moray, which altogether forms one of the finest tracts of ground in the northern part of Scotland. On the eastern side of the Deveron, in the district of Buchan, the parish of Gamrie and some other spots of land belong to Banffshire, which both in point of size and in population ranks as the fifteenth county in Scotland, containing 403,050 acres of land; and having a population in 1901 of 61,488, and in 1911 of 61,402, viz.:—males, 29,755; females, 31,647; the number of inhabited houses being 13,151; uninhabited, 697; building, 47.

Soil, Surface and Climate, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil, with few exceptions, is deep loam or tenacious clay. The face of the country is agreeably diversified by an intermixture of valleys and ranges of hills, with many beautiful fertile braes, productive of the finest crops, or serviceable for the excellence of their pasture. The Strath of Glen-Avon proceeds from the forest of Glen-Avon, in a north-westerly direction, and Strath Devon to the east. Betwixt these is Glen-Livet, from whence to the north diverges Glen Fiddich, with Glen Isla further north. The principal mountains in the county are:—Noath, 1,830; Buck, or Cabrach, 2,377; Knockhill, 2,500; Corryhabbie, 2,558; Ben Rinnes, 2,747; and Cairngorm, 4,244 feet above the level of the sea.

The chief crops in 1920 were:—Oats, 48,636 acres; barley, including bere, 9,505; rye, 38; peas, 57; total corn crops, 58,260; turnips and swedes, 20,475; potatoes, 1,925; vetches or tares, for seed, 60; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 665; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 67,312 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 64,078 acres; permanent grass, 10,197 acres; arable land, 148,795.

The live stock in 1920 comprised:—5,968 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 17; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,897; under one year, 787; other horses, 743; cows in milk, 10,575; cows in calf, but not in milk, 798; heifers in calf, 685; other cattle, two years and above, 6,856; one year and under two, 13,442; under one year, 10,927; ewes kept for breeding, 23,261; other sheep, one year and above, 9,411; under one year, 22,418; sows kept for breeding, 373; other pigs, 2,124.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 501; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 743; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 456; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 380; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 389; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 238; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 271; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 181; above 300 acres, 29; total, 3,188.

Great attention is paid to the cultivation of turnips for feeding purposes, the rearing of cattle forming for the most part the chief object of the farmer. The Aberdeenshire polled cattle and the pure short-horned are the breeds most esteemed. In many parts of the county fine flocks of sheep are to be met with, both of the Cheviot and the black-faced varieties.

The minerals raised in 1919 were:—Igneous rock, 24,834 tons; limestone, 10,956 tons and sandstone, 1,180 tons.

The fisheries are also of importance, more than a dozen towns and villages being connected, to a greater or less extent, with this industry.

There were in 1918 731 boats, with an aggregate tonnage of 17,001, registered at the port of Banff; 258 at Buckie, 7,243 tons; and besides, 248 steam and sailing vessels, of 7,987 tons, at the former and 138, of 4,655 tonnage, at the latter place. Cod, ling, haddock, whiting, halibut, skate and flounder frequent the Firth, and turbot and mackerel are occasionally caught, whilst in the season the herring yields a rich harvest to the fishermen. The curing of fish is of consequence, many persons being engaged in this branch of trade in several of the towns, in which are also extensive distilleries, Glenlivet whisky having become a famous brand. Limestone can be found beneath the surface of nearly the whole county, and at Portsoy is a fine vein of serpentine stone, called "Portsoy marble," as well as a species of granite which, when polished, exhibits the resemblance of Hebrew characters. Freestone, ironstone, marl and slate are also found in various parts. The chief articles of export are grain, fish and whisky; the salmon of the Spey and Deveron together also form an article of great consideration. The principal imports are coal, iron, timber and manures. The climate of Banffshire is precarious. In the hilly districts, all the evils of cold and rain are often felt; and as frost and snow frequently set in without any interval of good weather, the harvests are not only endangered, but at times are not finished until the end of October. The low ground of the shire, from Duffhouse to Forglen and Kinnairdy (a tract of about twelve miles along the Deveron), and from Banff to Gordon Castle, including the districts of Boyne and Enzie, must be excepted, being nearly equal to the climate of Moray, and greatly surpassing most parts of the country in the fertility of the soil, the improvement of its agriculture and the richness of its productions.

Rivers, Railways &c.—The rivers, besides the Spey, which, rising in Inverness and debouching in Elgin, only forms the western boundary of this county, are the Deveron, reaching the sea at Banff, and the smaller rivers of Livet, Isla, Avon, Dervie, Rinnie, Fiddish, water of Crombie and water of Calplaich. The Spey and Deveron furnish quantities of salmon. The principal sheet of water is Loch Avon, in the extreme south of the county. The railways belong to the Great North of Scotland system, and commencing from the east run as follows: the branch from Inveramsay through Turriff ends at Macduff; the main line from Aberdeen through Huntly, after sending a branch from Grange Junction north-east to Banff, reaches Keith and there branches southward to Dufftown and Aberlour and goes on through Mulben to Elgin, while a coast line from the latter town to Tillynaugh Junction below Banff feeds the various ports, such as Portsoy, Cullen &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Banffshire contains 22 entire civil parishes and 32 entire and 3 parts of ecclesiastical parishes, and is partly in the synod of Aberdeen and partly in that of Moray in Ross; it contains 2 royal burghs, Banff and Cullen, and 7 police burghs. The county returns one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1919 numbered 25,933.

ABERCHIRDER AND MARNOCH

ABERCHIRDER is a burgh in the parish of Marnoch, with station, named Glenbarry, on the Great North of Scotland railway, 6¼ miles distant, but the nearest station is Cornhill, 5 north-west on the same line; the village is 9 miles south-west of Banff, 11 north-east of Huntly, 8 west-north-west of Turriff and about 3 north of the river Deveron; it is in Buchan poor combination and Banff small debt court. Aberchirder was constituted a police burgh on 27th of Nov. 1889, by adoption of the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, but the affairs of the burgh are now administered under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. The parish church of Marnoch, built upwards of 100 years ago, and renovated in 1884, is a plain stone building with a belfry on the west gable and has sittings for 700 persons. A Mission Hall of the Established church was erected in Aberchirder in 1898 and will seat 500 persons. The Episcopal church of St. Marnan, built in 1824, consists of nave, with vestry and organ chamber added in 1875; there are sittings for 150 persons. The Rev. James Alexander Boyes M.A. has been rector since 1909. A Cottage Hospital was erected in 1892 to the memory of Miss Elizabeth Ogilvie Rose-Innes, of Netherdale Cottage, for whose bequest of £5,000 the inhabitants are much indebted. The chief landowners are the trustees of the late Duke of Fife K.T., P.C., G.C.V.O.; the trustees of the late T. G. Rose-Innes esq.; the representatives of the late W. T. Reid esq. and the trustees of Chalmers Hospital. The representatives of the late Alexander George esq. are the proprietors of the burgh of Aberchirder. Horse markets are held on third Tuesday in March and Monday before 28th May (feeing). The parish of Marnoch embraces an area of 14,961 statute acres; population of the parish in 1911, 2,532, the burgh of Aberchirder containing 1,048 of that number; area of Aberchirder burgh, 62 acres; rateable value, £3,140, and of the parish, £11,722.

ABERLOUR is a parish and village founded in 1812, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village, formerly called Charlestown, created a burgh or barony in 1814 and police burgh in 1894, is about 2¼ miles from Craigellachie Junction, 6 miles south-west of Dufftown, where the river Lour joins the Spey; the town formerly consisted only of one long street and a large square, but other streets have been erected. The Established church is a building in the Norman style with a tower and clock. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret of Scotland, a structure in the Early English style, was erected in 1880, at a cost of £11,000, the work having been commenced by the late Miss Macpherson Grant: the chancel screen was exhibited at the Paris Exhibition of 1862: the organ, a powerful instrument, was erected in memory of Miss Macpherson Grant: the altar is of Caen stone and green Irish marble and elevated on nine steps: the tabernacle, of wrought brass, and a massive silver sanctuary lamp were the gift of the Duke of Newcastle to commemorate his visit here in 1887: there are nineteen stained windows and the church affords 250 sittings; there is also a United Free church and a Catholic Mission. The Fleming Hall, in Queen's road, was built and opened in 1889, from a bequest by the late James Fleming esq. The Fleming Cottage Hospital was erected and endowed in 1899, at a cost of £4,000, from a similar bequest, and the Fleming Suspension bridge, which spans the river Spey from Aberlour to the Elchies, in Morayshire, was also built with a bequest from Mr. Fleming and cost £1,000. The Orphanage here, established in 1875, is supported mainly by voluntary contributions: this institution is for the reception of any children needing a home in Scotland and elsewhere, and they are looked after while earning their living, and a home made for them when out of situation or ill: there are now (1921) 500 inmates. A drinking fountain was erected in The Square in 1897, and presented to the town by the then Provost William McGowan, to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee in 1897 of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. There are two branch banks in the village. The distilling of whisky is carried on extensively, the Dailuaine distillery having made large additions to their premises. Ben Rinnes, 2,755 feet above the level of the sea, is in this parish. A short distance from the village stands Aberlour House, the residence of Sir John Ritchie Findlay K.B.E., D.L., J.P.; it is quadrangular in form, with columns of the Grecian Doric order, and affords splendid views of the surrounding country. Carron House is the seat of James William Hamilton Grant esq. D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are Sir John Ritchie Findlay K.B.E., D.L., J.P. James William Hamilton Grant esq. D.L., J.P. James Eadie esq. and Lady Lumsden. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in May and November (feeing). Acreage of the parish, 14,779; rateable value, £13,260; population in 1911, 2,644, of which 1,272 are in Charleston of Aberlour police burgh; area of burgh, 261 acres; population of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,569.

CRAIGELLACHIE is a pleasant village, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, in the parish of and situated 2 miles north-east from Aberlour. The Spey is here crossed by an iron bridge of a single span of 150 feet, erected in 1815 from designs by Thomas Telford F.R.S. at a cost of £8,000. From the bridge a fine view of the river is obtained. The Craigellachie distillery was erected in 1890. This beautiful district is frequented by a large number of visitors during the summer season, and a hotel ("The Craigellachie") was erected in 1892. The Elgin Market Green Auction Co. Limited hold a sale for cattle &c. at their mart monthly.

BANFF

BANFF is a royal burgh, the capital of the county and head of a parish, 155 miles north-by-east of Edinburgh, 80 east of Inverness, 46 north-by-west of Aberdeen, 35 east of Elgin, 25 east-by-north of Fochabers, 13 east of Cullen and 8 east-by-south of Portsoy, on the coast of the North Sea, pleasantly situated on the side of a hill overlooking the west bank of the Deveron at its confluence with the sea. This river, which abounds with salmon, is here crossed by a substantially-constructed bridge of seven arches, which gives access to the seaport of Macduff and to the adjoining county of Aberdeen. There is a terminal station at Banff on a branch, from Tillynaught, of the Great North of Scotland railway, and at the eastern end of Banff bridge is another station on the Turriff and Macduff section of the same line. This town was part of the ancient thanedom of Boin, whence the name seems to be derived, for in some old charters it is written Boineffe and Baineffe. It was founded, according to tradition, in 1163, by Malcom Canmore, and was erected into a royal burgh in 1372 by Robert II. who endowed it with the same privileges and placed it on the same footing as Aberdeen; it comprises several well-built streets, and is supplied with gas from works the property of a company. The town is governed by a provost, three bailies and five councillors. The town council are also commissioners under the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892." A small debt court is held every Tuesday and the sheriff's court every Wednesday during the session. The Town House is a modern building with an elegant spire.

The Established church is an eighteenth century building with a spire. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1834, affords 250 sittings, and attached to it is a mission church at Macduff; there is a United Free church, a Catholic church, a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, a Christian Meeting House and Salvation Army Barracks. The Museum and Free Library, in High street, was founded under the "Public Libraries Act, 1855" (18 and 19 Vict. c. 70): the library comprises 9,000 volumes, and both departments are controlled by a committee consisting of members of the town council and ratepayers; there is also a Law Library in the Court House buildings. Chalmers' Hospital was founded in 1861, in terms of a bequest by the late Alexander Chalmers, of Clunie, long a merchant in this town, and is for the support, maintenance, cure and relief of destitute sick and diseased persons of both sexes, born, domiciled and resident in any town or parish in the county of Banff. It is adapted for 60 patients, and has the requisite buildings for officials and attendants. A permanent revenue for the support of the hospital is derived from the rentals of the lands of Clunie and Knockorth. The phthisis block was opened in 1920. A Cholera and Small Pox Hospital has also been erected on the Braeheads to the west of the town. The Town and County Club was opened in September, 1881, and there are also two Golf Clubs. A drinking fountain was presented in memory of Walter Biggar esq. and Mrs. Ann Duff, his wife. The weekly corn and provision markets are held on Friday; Brandon fair on the last Fridays in May and November. There are five branch banks, a distillery, saw mill and an iron foundry. Ship and boat building, rope and sail making, and tanning are also carried on. The "Fife Arms" is the principal hotel. A newspaper, the "Banffshire Journal," is published on Tuesdays.

The inner harbour of Banff is secure, but has not a great depth of water; the outer basin, which is defended by a pier and breakwater, has a greater depth. A Morton's patent slip apparatus is here fitted up. The port, which extends from Pennan to Garmouth, stands sixth in the list of Scotch ports as regards tonnage of sailing ships. Shipping: The number of vessels (steam and sailing) registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," at this port, Dec. 31, 1918, was 248, with a tonnage of 7,987.

The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," at Banff, Dec. 31, 1918, was 731 of 17,001 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters B. F.

The chief trade is of an import nature, and comprises coals, timber, cement &c. In 1919, 35,997 cwts. of herrings were exported, valued at £37,565. From the bridge a fine view is obtained of Duff House, which, together with 140 acres of the park, was presented in 1907 to the Councils of the Royal Burgh of Banff and Macduff by the late Duke of Fife K.T.; the mansion is partly in the Corinthian and partly in the Composite style, and the front is elaborately decorated with sculpture. The House has been converted into a private hospital. The town formerly possessed a castle of considerable strength and magnitude, and the ancient walls, the moat, and traces of the entrenchments remain, but a modern mansion now occupies part of the site. Edward I. visited Banff Castle on Sunday, the 22nd of July, 1296, after Baliol, King of Scotland, had surrendered to him, at Montrose, on the 7th July preceding. After his defeat of Wallace at the battle of Falkirk, 22 July, 1298, Edward marched north and visited Banff Castle a second time, on the 4th Sept. in that year, and the public records show that it was the last stronghold possessed by the English north of the Grampians. The Castle thereafter became a constableship, and the residence of the king's representative or constable, who exercised judicial authority in the county. Dr. James Sharp, the celebrated Archbishop of St. Andrews, was born in Banff Castle, in May, 1613. Acreage of the parish, 6,072, of the burgh, 379 acres; rateable value, £21,330, i.e., burghal, £17,768; landward, £6,210; in 1911 the burgh of Banff had a population of 3,821, the civil parish, 4,570, and the ecclesiastical parish, 4,288.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 1,927.

BOYNDIE, see WHITEHILLS.

BUCKIE is a town and police burgh, with stations on the Great North of Scotland and Highland Railways. It is in the parish of Rathven, 20 miles west from Banff, 6 west from Cullen and 7 east from Fochabers. In the beginning of 1888 the General Police Act was adopted, and Easter Buckie, or Buckie proper, and Buckpool are both included in the police burgh of Buckie, which is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The Town is divided by the Aultmore burn, Buckie proper lying on its eastern bank and Buckpool on the west. The tenure under which property is held is mainly feu right. The Town is possessed of two harbours, that at Buckpool, constructed about 1862, at a cost of £18,000, and the Cluny harbour, begun in 1874 and completed by the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, at an expense of about £70,000; an inside jetty was added in 1895, and is now (1921) being enlarged. A number of curing stations and other stores have been erected by the Cluny Trustees. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A small debt court is held here. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Catholic church, and Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of All Saints will seat 180 persons; the Rev. Ernest Nevill Beresford Cooke has been rector since 1915. The number of sailing and steam vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port December 31st, 1918, was 138 of 4,655 tonnage. The number of fishing boats registered as belonging to the port, under Part IV. of the same Act, Dec. 31, 1918, was 258 of 7,243 tons. The Buckie fishing district comprises the neighbouring stations on the coast. The Fish Mart, a large building immediately facing the Cluny harbour, was erected in 1890 at a cost of about £2,000, and contains a large auction room and numerous offices.

The Masonic and Literary Institute, in Cluny place, opened in 1891, was erected at a cost of about £2,000, and has since been enlarged at a cost of £1,000; it contains a council room, reading room, library, museum, billiard room and masonic temple. There is also a public park. There are good hotels in the town. The North of Scotland and Town and County (Low Street and Cluny Square) Bank Limited, the Union Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches here. Besides the fish curing trade there are other industries, including net and rope factories and steam saw mills, and at Inchgower is a distillery. In June, 1893, a public park was presented to the town by Lady Gordon Cathcart, of Cluny Castle. Cairnfield House, the seat of Mrs. Gordon, and Letterfourie, the seat of Miss Shee, are in the vicinity. Trustees of the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, trustees of the late Sir Robert G. Gordon bart. and Miss Shee are the principal landowners. A newspaper, "The Banffshire Advertiser," is published on Thursdays. The area of the burgh is 840 acres; rateable value, £32,036; population in 1901, 6,549, and in 1911, 8,897, viz.: East Ward, 6,116; West Ward, 2,781. Population of the ecclesiastical parish, 8,096.

PORTESSIE became part of the burgh of Buckie 15th May, 1903, and has a Wesleyan chapel. It is a small coast village, 1 mile east, in the parish of Rathven, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village is of some consequence as a boat building and fishing station. Rateable value, £2,086.

CABRACH is a parish, part of which was formerly in the county of Aberdeen, but it is now wholly included in that of Banff, and extends in length 8 miles by about 5 in breadth and is about 10 miles south-east from Dufftown station on the Great North of Scotland railway and 12 south-west from Gartly station on the Inverurie and Huntly branch of the same railway; it is distant from Aberdeen 15 miles west-north-west and from Huntly 18 south-west. CULLEN is a royal burgh, and seaport town, 191 miles north-north-east of Edinburgh, 22 east of Elgin, 13 north-east of Fochabers, 14 west of Banff and 6 west of Portsoy. The harbour was constructed in 1819, at a cost of £4,000, and has since undergone extensive improvements. The burgh, situated on a commanding eminence overlooking the Moray Firth, formerly consisted of two distinct towns, the Sea Town and the Old Town, but between 1820-30 the latter was wholly removed from its site adjacent to Cullen House to its present position, the church alone remaining. It has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and on the west the line is carried over the town by a series of arches which terminate in a viaduct of eight arches between 70 and 80 feet high, spanning the mouth of the Cullen burn; there is also a station at Tochieneal, 1 mile distant, on the Great North of Scotland railway. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and a justice of the peace small debt court is held on the first Tuesday in every month. The Established church is a pre-Reformation building of much interest, dating from the 14th century; it contains numerous ancient monuments and inscriptions in an excellent state of preservation, and on the north side is an aumbry, with an inscription from the Vulgate. There is a United Free church, rebuilt in 1901, an Episcopal church, purchased from the United Free church in 1904, and a Wesleyan chapel. There is a public newsroom and library in the town, and three hotels. A fair is held on the third Friday in May. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The exportation of fish is carried on.

Cullen House, the property of the trustees of the late Caroline Countess Dowager of Seafield, and the residence of Nina Countess of Seafield, is an ancient and irregular edifice, but the interior is furnished in the modern style, and adorned with paintings by eminent masters: the Cullen stream passes under the south walls, and on the opposite side are the park and pleasure grounds, which are connected with the house by an elegant arch of 84 feet span; the grounds are open to the public on Tuesdays and Fridays. Not far distant once stood the castle in which Elizabeth (de Burgh), queen of King Robert Bruce, died, 26 Oct. 1327. An eminence called Castle Hill, at the western extremity of the town, is the site of an ancient fortification, which must formerly have been a place of great strength; an almost perpendicular rock renders it inaccessible from the north, and it is surrounded in every other direction by a deep ditch. Carvings in stone of the national and other arms, with two small bronze cannon of Queen Mary's time, still remain on the Castle Hill. In the centre of the town stands a cross bearing figures of the Virgin and Child; the shaft dates from the 17th century; but the main part is of recent date. The ruins of Findlater Castle, a building of great antiquity, are situated about 2 miles east of Cullen. The area of the parish of Cullen is 881 acres; rateable value, landward, £1,387; area of burgh, 253 acres; rateable value, £5,723; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,153. The population of the municipal and royal burgh in 1911 was 1,992.

DUFFTOWN AND MORTLACH

DUFFTOWN, a village, founded in 1817, was created a police burgh under the "General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act" in 1863. The burgh is in the parish of Mortlach and is 118 miles north of Edinburgh, 52 north-west of Aberdeen, 30 south-west of Banff, 14 north-east of Inveravon, 10 south-west of Keith and 6 south-east of Aberlour, situated a short way to the north of the old decayed hamlet of Mortlach, near the junction of the Dullan and the Fiddoch waters. It has a station on the Elgin and Keith branch line of the Great North of Scotland railway, via Rothes and Craigellachie Junction. Dufftown burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. This place has been much improved by its patrons, the late Duke of Fife and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the former having in 1881 carried out a thorough system of drainage at a cost of about £700. The town comprises a central open square from which streets diverge each side. In the centre of the square stands a large tower of considerable height, with turrets at the corners and surmounted by a belfry containing one bell and a clock with four dials, which, in commemoration of the Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, were converted into illuminated dials at a cost of about £70: it was formerly used as a gaol, but is now used as the burgh chambers and court house, and includes a dwelling place for the burgh officer. During the summer months the burgh is much frequented by visitors, on account of its healthy situation and the beautiful scenery in and around its vicinity. There are two hotels, viz. the Fife Arms and the Commercial. A trade in lime is carried on here, and there are seven distilleries. There are two branch banks, viz. the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. A commodious Masonic Hall was built in 1887, which is also used for meetings &c. A sheriff court for small debt cases is held four times a year, in January, April, July and October, as fixed by the sheriff. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, which is of very ancient date, restored in 1877 at a cost of £1,500: in 1888 a fine organ was erected at a cost of £700: the building has three fine lancet windows in the east end, and contains several interesting monuments, one being erected in 1420 in memory of a chamberlain of Balvenie Castle, another to a John Gordon, of Brodland, who died in 1433 at Buchromb, also one at the end of the 17th century, interesting as being the monument of an ancestor of the late Duke of Fife: it is asserted that this church was the cathedral of the first Bishopric of Scotland, and that the three bishops of this see were buried here, the bishopric being afterwards transferred to Aberdeen. The United Free church was enlarged and remodelled in 1891, when a tower and spire were added, and a stained window has been presented by Lord Mount-Stephen. A Congregational and Vestry Hall in connection therewith was erected in 1906 at a cost of about £280, most of which was defrayed by Lord Mount-Stephen. The Episcopal church, erected in 1880 by Canon Jupp, of Aberlour, in memory of his mother, is an edifice in the Gothic style and will seat 135 persons: the circular east window is stained. There is also a Roman Catholic church. In August, 1901, Lord Mount-Stephen set aside a sum of money to provide annual pensions of £16 to each of fifty old persons in his native parish: Trustees—The Cottage Hospital Trustees, Provost of Dufftown, and the ministers of the Established churches of Glenrinnes and Mortlach, United Free and Roman Catholic churches of Dufftown, and the chairman of the Mortlach Parish Council; secretary and treasurer, J. L. Craig, solicitor. The Stephen Cottage Hospital was founded in 1889, at a cost of £2,500, by Lord Mount-Stephen, of Mount Stephen, British Columbia, Canada, and Brocket Hall, Hatfield, Herts, who was born at Dufftown in 1829; it is beautifully equipped and contains 10 beds and one cot; the endowment fund is £15,000, and it is open to the inhabitants of Mortlach and Glenrinnes. A new Isolation Hospital for Upper Banffshire was erected in 1903, containing 12 beds, at a cost of £3,664; the combining authorities are the upper district of Banff and the Police Burghs of Aberlour and Dufftown. The Mortlach Parish Hall, opened in 1894, at a cost of £1,600, is vested in the kirk session of the parish church, and comprises a public reading room and library; the hall itself will hold 700 people. Mortlach is famous as the scene of the signal victory gained over the Danes by Malcolm II. in 1010, which was fought a few hundred yards south-west of Balvenie Castle. KEITH is a police burgh, market town and parish. The town is 170 miles north of Edinburgh, 22 south-west of Banff, 17 east-south-east of Elgin, 50 north-east of Aberdeen, 60 east of Inverness, 8 south-east of Fochabers, 17 south-south-west of Portsoy and 12 south of Cullen, and is situate on the banks of the Isla, in the centre of an amphitheatre of hills, with stations on the Great North of Scotland and Highland railways. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and councillors. Keith is divided into three distinct towns, namely, Old Keith, New Keith and Fife Keith; the latter, erected by a former Earl of Fife, is separated from Old and New Keith by the Isla. New Keith was begun about the year 1750 by James (Ogilvy) 5th Earl of Findlater, upon a barren tract of land, feued off in tenements of 15 yards by 60. It is formed on a regular plan of three parallel streets and a square, and is lighted with gas. There are no authentic documents to record the origin of Old Keith, but it has certainly existed for over six centuries, and was at one time the county town. The town is governed by a provost and two bailies and nine councillors, and has a sheriff court for small debt cases, and other business is held every alternate month in the Institute Hall. The water supply and sanitary arrangements of the town were modernised in 1911. The water works yield an additional daily supply of about 120,000 gallons of water. The Established church opened in 1819, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,800. There are also United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1883, will seat 300 persons. The Turner Memorial Cottage Hospital is a building of stone, erected in 1880 at the cost of £1,200, and endowed with £3,000 by the late James Taylor M.D. Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets, a native of Keith: it contains 16 beds, and in 1893 an extension for eight additional beds was provided by the late G. Kynoch esq. of Isla Bank: it also possesses various other endowments. In Reidhaven square stands a drinking fountain of polished granite, erected in 1885 to the memory of James Taylor esq. M.D. of this place, by his fellow townsmen. The Institute, in Mid street, erected in 1886, having been destroyed by fire, was rebuilt in 1889, and comprises a museum, public library, reading room and billiard room; various societies have their offices and hold meetings here. The Longmore Public Hall, in Church street, the Territorial Hall, in Cross street, and St. Thomas Hall, in Chapel street, are available for meetings, concerts &c. The Police Station, in Turner street, was erected in 1893, and has attached dwellings for officers. Weekly markets are held on Saturdays, and feeing markets in March, May, July (harvest) and November. The horse market in September is one of the largest in the north. The market stance, at the south end of the town, is of considerable extent. There are meal mills, manure manufactories, two extensive distilleries and an agricultural implement manufactory and woollen factories. Branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank Limited are maintained in the town. On the banks of the Isla, a little below the town, are the ruins of a castle, which belonged to the Oliphant family. The Suit-Roll-Croft, on the banks of the Isla, near Keith, the ancient gathering-place of the Clan Gordon, is now marked by Suttrall House, Fife Keith. Keith was the birthplace in 1710 of James Ferguson F.R.S. the astronomer, who died 16 Nov. 1776. On the Caird's Hill are Druidical remains, and near these several tumuli, found to contain various sepulchral relics. H.R.H. Princess Royal, the trustees of Caroline Countess of Seafield, and William F. D. Steuart esq. are owners of the manor and the principal landowners. The "Banffshire Herald" is published here. The area of the parish is 19,395 acres; rateable value, £33,000; area of burgh, 548 acres; population in 1911, 6,395, of which the town contained 4,499. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 5,047.

NEWMILL is a village in the parish of Keith, 1½ miles from that town, and with the neighbouring district was erected into a quoad sacra parish in 1867. The Established church and manse here were built in 1870, and there is also a United Free Church Mission hall, built in 1887. Population in 1901, 657, and in 1911, 1,244.

MACDUFF,

CROVIE, AND THE PARISH OF GAMRIE.

MACDUFF is a seaport town and police burgh in the parish of Gamrie, about a mile east from the town of Banff, on the opposite side of the Deveron river, and on the declivity of a hill descending towards the shore of the North Sea, and has a terminal station on the Turriff and Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Macduff harbour, now considered one of the best on the Moray Firth, was purchased by the town in 1898 and in 1903 it was deepened 6 feet, thus giving a uniform depth of 16½ feet during spring tides; as a station for the herring fishery, it is exceedingly valuable, large quantities of that fish being shipped from this port: several vessels trade with the Baltic; the number of fishing boats (which are registered under Banff) is very considerable, and there are various fish curing establishments. The town is in the small debt court district of Banff, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. It is built on the property of the trustees of the late Duke of Fife K.T., G.C.V.O. and is indebted for its chief improvements and prosperity to James, 2nd Earl of Fife, through whose influence it was created a burgh of barony by George III. in 1783, when its name was altered from Doun to Macduff, and from that period it has continued to increase in extent and consequence. The church occupies a conspicuous position on an eminence, and in its precincts stands a cross erected by the late Duke of Fife. There is also a United Free church and a Congregational chapel. The Murray's Trust was founded in 1849 by a Mr. Murray, of London, a canvas manufacturer and a native of Macduff, and is administered by a scheme under the provisions of the "Educational Endowments (Scotland) Act"; the funds now amount to about £6,000, the interest on which is expended on school bursaries and dinners for poor children. The Town Hall was built at a cost of £2,100. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited have branches here. The greater portion of the grain produced for twenty miles east of Macduff is exported hence, as are salmon, cod and herring, and the country inland is supplied with coal, bone manure and lime, a manure factory being established here. The area of Macduff is 389 acres; rateable value, £10,090; population in 1911, 3,411 in the burgh; viz.:—North Ward, 1,684; South Ward, 1,727 and 3,798 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The parish of GAMRIE extends along the coast, which is precipitous and indented with caverns, for about 9 miles, by an average breadth of about 2½. The village is situated about 2 miles south of Gamrie Bay, and has Established and United Free churches. Troup House is now (1921) unoccupied. The land is partly under tillage and partly in pasture. Acreage, 17,047; rateable value, £20,902; population of the whole parish in 1911, 6,260 in the civil parish and 1,057 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CROVIE is a small fishing village in the parish of Gamrie, situated one mile east of Gardenstown, Macduff, 8 miles distant, on the Great North of Scotland railway, is the nearest railway station. Population in 1911, 232.

The harbour is commodious, and is enclosed with walls of Portland cement concrete, constructed at the sole expense of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. The inhabitants are almost exclusively occupied in herring fishing and the ship building trade, and employ stake and bag nets for the capture of salmon, which are very abundant, this place being in the immediate vicinity of Speymouth. About 1 mile to west of village is the Spey Bay 18-hole golf course. Dry, bracing climate. A narrow rivulet separates this village from Port Tannachy. PORTSOY AND FORDYCE

PORTSOY is a seaport in the parish of Fordyce, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 178 miles north of Edinburgh, 62 east-by-north of Inverness, 18 east-north-east of Fochabers and 8 west-by-north of Banff; it is situated on a tongue of land projecting into the North Sea, at the head of one of those little bays by which this part of the coast is in many places indented. It was erected into a burgh of barony about the 16th century by the lord of Boyne, whose descendants embracing the fortunes of the Pretender in 1715 forfeited their lands to the Crown, and these were subsequently granted to James, 4th Earl of Findlater and 1st Earl of Seafield, and are still in the possession of the Ogilvy Grant family, Earls of Seafield. The town is small and irregularly built, and is lighted with acetylene from works the property of the Town Council. The point of land on which it stands forms a safe harbour, sufficiently deep for vessels of upwards of 100 tons burthen. The town adopted the General Police and Improvements Act on October 8th, 1889, the number of commissioners being nine, and is in the Banff small debt court district.

There is an Established church, erected in 1816, at a cost of £2,000, and restored in 1881; there was two United Free churches, one built in 1844, at an expense of £1,800, and rebuilt in 1871, and another built in 1866, at a cost of £830, but now united in one congregation; the Episcopal church of St. John the Baptist, erected in 1840, at a cost of £2,480, will seat 125 persons: the Roman Catholic church was erected in 1828. The Campbell Hospital, the gift of James Campbell esq. D.L., LL.D., J.P. of Old Cullen, opened July 30th, 1904, is a building of stone, situated on an eminence overlooking the sea and comprises two wards; it is intended for the benefit of the lower district of the county of Banff and the burghs of Macduff, Banff, Portsoy, Cullen and Buckie. There is a Christian Institute, with a library of about 1,800 volumes. Fish curing and distilling are prominent industries. Some singular specimens of schist and a species of asbestos of a greenish hue are met with in this neighbourhood; but the most remarkable mineral production is a granite of a buff or flesh colour, which is not found elsewhere except in Arabia. This district also abounds with excellent limestone. The trustees of the late Dowager Countess of Seafield are the principal landowners. The extensive ruins of the old castles of Boyne and Findlater, lying to the east and west of Portsoy, possess great attractions for the antiquary and pleasure seeker. A weekly newspaper, "The Banffshire Reporter," is published here every Wednesday. Area of Portsoy burgh, 225 acres; rateable value, £5,650; population in 1911, 1,951, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,172.

FORDYCE is a parish of great antiquity, about 8 miles west of Banff, on the Great North of Scotland railway; station at Portsoy, 2½ miles from Fordyce, and Glassaugh, about one mile; the parish is in the small debt court district of Banff. There are Established and United Free churches, the first-named built in 1806 and the latter in 1843. Large Board schools were erected in 1881-82, at an expense of £1,839, at which there are a number of bursaries, administered by the governors of the County of Banff Bursary Fund, and tenable by either boys or girls. At what was formerly the old parochial school the late Sir James Clark bart. physician in ordinary to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and the late John Forbes esq. physician extraordinary to H.R.H. the Prince Consort, received the early part of their education. A large castellated building, standing on the east side of The Square, and bearing the date of 1592, originally belonged to the Durn family, but is now the property of the Grant family, Earls of Seafield. Acreage of the parish, 17,211; rateable value, £18,934; population in 1911, 3,980, of which Portsoy contained 1,951. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,808.

SANDEND is a small fishing village in this parish, situated about 3 miles west of Portsoy. The nearest station is at Glassaugh, about a mile distant from the village of Fordyce and the same from Sandend, on the Great North of Scotland railway.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED

WITH TWEEDMOUTH, SPITTAL AND ORD

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED (so denominated to distinguish it from North Berwick, in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England) is a county of itself (so constituted by 6 and 7 William IV. c. 105), a municipal borough and seaport, union and market town, and head of a county court district, 334 miles north-by-west from London, 64 north-by-west from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 49 north from Morpeth: from the city of Edinburgh it is distant 58 miles south-east (by rail), and from Glasgow 103¼ east-by-south: it is in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of the county of Northumberland for parliamentary purposes, in the Norhamshire and Islandshire petty sessional division, rural deanery of Norham, archdeaconry of Lindisfarne and diocese of Newcastle. It is a town of considerable importance, of Saxon or Teutonic origin. The etymology of its name is as doubtful as the period of its establishment is obscure. Maitland, the historian of Edinburgh, entered into a dissertation to prove that the title was transferred by the Saxon founders from a town of note of the same name in their own country—in the like manner as European emigrants designate cities and towns on the continent of America; others, and among them Camden, allege that the word Berwick is deduced from "Barwica," signifying "a village belonging to a manor;" while Leland concludes it to be a shortened form of "Aberwic," from the Cymric aber, the mouth of a river, and the Scandinavian wick, a creek or station for ships. Berwick was fortified and defended by a garrison at a very remote period of British history; it became the chief town of the district, and was the centre, on various occasions, of many important transactions. The town stands in a gentle declivity on the north side of the river Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that stream empties itself into Berwick bay, and is said to have been of importance as a barrier town in the 8th and 9th centuries. Prior to the year 1551 Berwick was alternately in the hands of the English and Scotch, but in pursuance of a treaty effected in that year between Edward VI. and Mary, Queen of Scots, it was erected into a free burgh or distinct liberty, in some measure independent of either kingdom, having a small district attached to it, called "Berwick bounds," stretching about three miles north, and the like distance up the Tweed, and it is described as a large and populous town so early as the reign of David I. of Scotland (1124-53). It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some ages, and was subsequently held by the Danes. Malcolm II. of Scotland, having defeated Eadulf Cudel, Earl of Northumbria, in the year 1018, became possessed of all the Lothians down to the Tweed, after which time Berwick remained in Scotch hands till the reign of Henry II. when it was delivered up to the English as security for the fulfilment of a treaty made in December, 1174, between Henry II. and William I. of Scotland, who, having joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland, and as a security he was forced to deliver up the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal fortresses of Scotland. In 1291, 3 Aug. commissioners from both kingdoms, 104 in number, assembled at Berwick to determine the respective claims of Robert Bruce and John Baliol to the Scottish crown, when, after numerous conferences, on the 14th November the king appointed John Baliol successor to the crown.

After the battle of Halidon Hill (1333) the town surrendered to the English, though considered a part of Scotland, and because of its peculiar position has been since specially mentioned in Acts of Parliament affecting England and Wales. Berwick was but little affected by the conflicts of the Houses of York and Lancaster; on the accession of James VI. of Scotland to the English crown, he made his state entry into England from this town, the importance of which, as a border town, thenceforward declined. Before the Civil war, a treaty or agreement, known as "The Pacification of Berwick," was concluded here 17 June, 1639, between Charles I. and five Scottish commissioners, for the disbandment of their respective forces, and during the progress of the contest the town maintained for the most part a neutral attitude. In the risings of 1715 and 1745 the population sided with the English. Her Majesty Queen Victoria visited the town on the opening of the railway viaduct, 29 August, 1850.

The town is surrounded by regular fortifications, the old circuit of which extended 2 miles 282 yards; the present walls, built chiefly in 1560, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, are only about one mile and a third in length, and at the present time the ramparts, which are in the custody of the Corporation, form an excellent promenade entirely round the town. The ancient castle, of which only the western curtain with its two towers remains, occupied a considerable eminence to the north-east of the town, and must have been of great strength. The modern town, well and regularly built, is united to Tweedmouth by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of 15 spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge is 1,164 feet, and its width is 17 feet. It was commenced in 1610, in the reign of James I. and finished in 1634, in the reign of Charles I. at a total cost of about £15,000, and is now lighted with gas. About a quarter of a mile higher up the river is the railway viaduct, known as the "Royal Border Bridge," designed by the late Mr. Robert Stephenson and Mr. T. E. Harrison, civil engineers, and opened by Her Majesty Queen Victoria and Prince Albert on 29 Aug. 1850, the total cost being £184,143. This magnificent structure spans the broad valley of the Tweed, and completes an important link in the chain of railway communications between London and Edinburgh by the north-east coast. It forms the northern extremity of the North Eastern railway: and in magnitude of construction and grandeur of design is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable architectural achievements of modern times. The foundation stone of this noble structure was laid on the 15th May, 1847, without any public ceremony. The viaduct consists of 28 circular arches, each 61 feet 6 inches span, springing from lofty piers 8 feet 6 inches broad at the narrowest point. One half of the arches span the river—here a broad and beautiful stream—and the remainder are built on the neighbouring land south of the Tweed. The total length of the bridge is 2,152 feet, and its greatest height from the bed of the river 138 feet 6 inches, including the parapets; its breadth between the parapets is 26 feet, allowing a double line of rails to be laid, and the greatest depth of water at high tide is 23 feet. The viaduct is built entirely of stone, with the exception of the inner part of the arches, which is brick laid in cement. The large embankment at the south end of the bridge, five-eighths of a mile in length, and in some places 60 feet high, completes the junction of Tweedmouth with Berwick, and at each of these places there are passenger and goods stations. The pier, begun in 1810 and finished in 1821 at a cost of £61,536, is 960 yards in length, and forms a fine breakwater, with a lighthouse at the extreme end; the pier, combined with Pier road, which extends westward, affords a fine and salubrious promenade.

By a Treasury Order, dated January 6th, 1860, the port of Berwick-upon-Tweed was re-limited, and appointed to extend on and after that date from St. Abb's Head, the southern limit of the port of Leith, and to continue along the coasts of the counties of Berwick and Northumberland to Seton House Point, about 1 mile north of the river Aln, being the northern limit of the port of Shields: also to include Farne and three smaller islands; and the limits seaward to extend 3 miles from low water mark out to sea.

The exportation of coal from the mines in the neighbourhood forms an important feature in the commerce of the port, while that of grain, manure, and salmon caught in the Tweed (the latter sent to the London markets) is nearly equally profitable. The principal fishing stations are from the mouth of the river to Norham, a distance of 7 miles. The season commences on the 15th February and terminates on the 14th September. The port has the privilege of the "Warehousing Act, 1825" (6 George IV.), and is now a bonded port for the reception of wines and colonial produce.

Berwick appears to have possessed a municipality with a guild from an early period: it is recorded as a borough in 1200, and received its first charter of municipal privileges from Edward I. in 1301, and James I. in his second year (1604-5) granted to the borough a new charter, extending the privileges of the corporation, and augmenting the number of its officers, besides giving to it the power of life and death. Under the provisions of the "Municipal Corporations Act, 1835," the government is vested in a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, with a recorder and the usual assistant officers, under the style of the "Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of the Borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed;" the same Act divided the borough into four wards and provided it with a commission of the peace; there is also a sheriff. The peculiar power of life and death was abolished by the "Limitation of Jurisdiction of Quarter Sessions Act, 1842." Sessions are held quarterly, presided over by the Recorder, H. F. Manisty esq. K.C.; the Corporation, as lords of the manor, hold courts leet and baron twice in the year, and Berwick is included in the first circuit of county court towns under the acts for the recovery of debts. The limits of the borough are defined by the Boundary Act to comprise the parish of Berwick and the respective townships of Tweedmouth and Spittal. The borough was first represented in the English Parliament in the reign of Henry VIII. and from that time (1529) it continued to send two members, until the passing of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," when it was included in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of Northumberland, which extends from Felton on the south to Berwick on the north, taking in the whole of the coast from the Coquet to the Tweed, being bounded by the limits of the county on the west. It contains the petty sessional divisions of Bamburgh, Coquetdale North, Glendale, Norhamshire and Islandshire, Coquetdale East (except the parishes of Gloster Hill, Morwick, Acklington, Acklington Park, Amble, Hauxley, Warkworth and Tongstone), and the municipal borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed.

This place gave the title of duke (March 19, 1687) to James Fitz-James, natural son of King James II.

Up to the year 1310 Berwick was ecclesiastically in the archdeaconry of Lothian and diocese of St. Andrew's, but was transferred by Edward II. to Durham, and so continued until 1882, when it became part of the new diocese of Newcastle-on-Tyne, formed by Order in Council, 17 May, 1882, under the "Bishoprics Act, 1878" (41 and 42 Vict. c. 68).

The parish church of the Holy Trinity, begun in 1648 and finished in 1652, is an edifice of stone, in a Pseudo-Italian style, and forms a parallelogram, 90 feet by 64 feet, divided by arcades of five arches into a nave, with aisles of equal length, and on the north side a smaller aisle and large vestry west of it, and a chancel, 23 feet in length: there being no tower, the 4 bells are placed in the bell-tower of the Town Hall: a reredos was erected in 1893 at a cost of about £300; in 1855 the church was repaired and enlarged by the addition of a chancel, and the interior re-arranged, at a cost of £3,000, and in 1867 was further improved at a cost of more than £4,000: in 1905 the north and south galleries were removed, an organ chamber erected and further improvements carried out at a cost of £2,000: there are 800 sittings. Since the public cemetery in the North road was opened it is only in rare cases that interments take place in the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1572. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £500, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1914 by the Rev. Richard Willis de la Hey M.A. of University College, Oxford; there is also a lectureship belonging to the church, in the gift of the Mercers' Company of London. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the rectors. The rectorial tithes amount to £2,300 yearly.

St. Mary's church, Castlegate, is a stone edifice, erected in 1858, at the expense of the late Captain George Gordon, who presented £3,000 towards its completion, and is built of polished ashlar stone, in the Lancet style, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts, north vestry and a small tower at the south-west angle of the nave, with an octagonal gabled belfry, surmounted by a spire and containing 2 bells: in 1920 the church spire was renovated and a new vane added at a cost of about £3,000: the lower stage of the tower forms a porch: there are 472 sittings. The register dates from 1859. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £320, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, and held since 1920 by the Rev. Samuel Edward Raymond Fenning M.C.

The Catholic church of Our Blessed Lady and St. Cuthbert, in Ravensdowne street, is a building of stone, erected in 1829, and has 300 sittings. The other places of worship comprise one of the Church of Scotland; three for the Presbyterian Church of England, that in Wallace green being a very fine building, erected at a cost of nearly £10,000, with 991 sittings; a United Methodist chapel, Primitive Methodist and Baptist chapels, a Presbyterian Mission hall and Salvation Army barracks.

The Cemetery, on the Edinburgh road, about 1 mile from the town, comprises about 9 acres, well laid out and planted with evergreens and trees: there are two mortuary chapels, in the Gothic style, and an entrance lodge. The ancient bier removed from the old church is deposited here, and bears the date 1620. The cemetery is under the control of a Burial Board of nine members.

The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the east end of High street, was erected in 1754-61, and is a building of stone in the Classic style, approached by an ascent of fifteen steps: above the portico rises a tower, adorned with columns of the Tuscan, Doric and Ionic orders, and surmounted by a spire, the whole reaching a height of 150 feet, and containing an excellent peal of 8 bells, four of which are the parish church bells, placed there owing to there being no tower attached to the church; they are rung before the commencement of each service, and the early and curfew bells are still rung daily, except on Sundays, at 8 p.m.: there is also a clock with four dials lighted by gas. All the municipal affairs of the borough are transacted here: the hall in which public meetings are held, and where the recorder holds quarter sessions four times a year, will hold 700 persons. There is also a council chamber, and cells to contain 14 prisoners, but these are now disused; the ground floor is appropriated to the sale of poultry, eggs and butter. The municipal insignia include two maces, two gold chains, one for the mayor and the other for the sheriff, and a seal. Two early seals are also known: the first of these, which is appended to a deed of 1330, has on the obverse a bear chained to a tree, in the branches of which are two birds surrounded by a double tressure of fleurs-de-lis, and a mutilated inscription: the reverse displays a representation of the Holy Trinity, with another inscription. The other seal is a circular seal of the mayoralty, and bears what Lewis (Topog. Dict. 1835) describes as the arms of the town, viz. in base a bear chained under a tree, over which in fess are two shields of France modern and English quarterly, and in chief under a canopy, the figure of a king, robed and crowned and holding the orb and sceptre: the margin bears a legend. The modern seal has simply a bear chained under a tree and a surrounding inscription.

The Corn Exchange, in Sandgate, is a large and commodious building, erected by a limited liability company, and was opened in June, 1858. Besides being well suited for the purpose for which it was built, it is also available for meetings and entertainments, and is licensed for stage plays. It is well lighted and heated, and will hold 1,500 persons.

The Queen's Rooms, in Hide hill, erected by Mr. J. D. Purves, in 1880, are also used for meetings, entertainments &c. The large hall (with gallery) will hold 1,000 persons.

The Free Public Reading Room and Museum, in High street, is a very substantial building, erected in 1881, at a cost of £2,000. It also contains a museum of the natural history of the district.

The Masonic Hall, situate on the Parade, and erected in 1873, is a handsome building of stone, and in Coxon's lane is the Good Templars' Hall, built in 1874, and seating 600.

There are Subscription Reading Rooms, with a billiard room, in Palace green; numerous clubs and political associations, and an Athletic Society.

The Dispensary and Infirmary, in Infirmary square, was first instituted in 1814; the present building was erected in 1874, and enlarged in 1899, and is supported by voluntary contributions; it is available for 40 in-patients. An operating theatre was added in 1908, at a cost of £800, also a complete X-ray outfit.

The local charities for pensions and distribution amount to about £150 yearly.

At Berwick is the depot of the 25th Regimental District (King's Own Scottish Borderers), comprising 1st and 2nd battalions (25th Foot), and 3rd battalion (Scottish Borderers Militia).

The Barracks, on the Parade, near the walls on the east side of the town, were erected in the year 1719, and are arranged so as to form a quadrangle, 217 by 121 feet; the principal or north front includes the officers' quarters, mess-room and guard-room; and the remaining portions afford room for 240 men. In 1893 additional buildings were erected on the King's Bastion for 10 married soldiers and families. New buildings were erected in 1900 for the storage of arms, army clothing and equipment for 1,000 men.

At Ravensdowne are the head quarters of the G and H Cos. 7th Territorial Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers.

The Territorial Drill Hall, in Ravensdowne, built in 1891, is an edifice of stone, with a tower of two storeys; the hall is 82 feet long by 53 feet wide, and 16 feet high, and there are mess and other rooms attached.

The Coastguard Station, entered from and on rising ground above the Pier road, to the south-east of the town, was erected in 1879, and has a life-saving apparatus, there being another at Spittal (the property of the Board of Trade), and two boats; there is a staff of one officer and six men.

The educational establishments of Berwick are the Grammar School, enlarged in 1899 for the convenience of teaching chemistry and physics; the Corporation Academy (endowed) (for the children of freemen solely, the salaries of the rector and teachers and all other expenses being paid by the Corporation), is now closed; the High School for Girls; County Council and Church of England and Catholic schools.

There is a 9-hole golf course at Magdalen fields.

The Banks here are the British Linen Bank; the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited; the Bank of Liverpool and Martins Limited and Messrs. Barclays Bank Ltd. all in Hide hill; the Berwick and Tweedmouth Savings Bank, in Sandgate, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, 7 Bridge end.

There is one good hotel—the King's Arms, in Hide hill.

The Maclagan Memorial, in High street, is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1893 to Philip W. Maclagan esq. M.D.; there is also an elegant drinking fountain in Castlegate, presented June 20, 1887, in commemoration of the sixtieth anniversary of the accession of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, by Commander Francis Martin Norman R.N., J.P.

A marble monument with granite base, bearing the following inscription: "Annie, Lady Jerningham, of Longridge Towers, Berwick-on-Tweed, obit 9th Oct. 1902; presented to the town of Berwick-on-Tweed by Sir Hubert Jerningham K.C.M.G. was erected on Bank hill in 1908.

Berwick can scarcely be said to possess any staple trade except the salmon fisheries. There are two breweries and seed-crushing works.

There are two auction marts, one in Castlegate; the other, built in 1910, situated in North road, is the property of the Berwick and Cornhill Auction Co. Limited, who hold sales every Monday.

The Fish Market, which is in general abundantly supplied, is held at the Quay side. Salmon, cod, whiting, haddocks, lobsters and crabs are the principal fish caught near here.

The Cattle Market, in Castlegate, was opened in October, 1886, and markets are held every Saturday; there is also an annual fair for cattle and horses on the last Friday in May.

The March hirings for farm servants are held on the first Saturday in March.

Five newspapers are published here.

TWEEDMOUTH is a populous parish and township, now forming part of the borough of Berwick. It is situated at the south end of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile from Berwick, and consists of several streets irregularly built, but the general appearance of the place has been much improved of late years. The North Eastern stations for both goods and passengers are at the eastern end of the town. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the salmon fishery; and the other branches of trade, exports and imports, are of the like nature with those of Berwick. There are works for the manufacture of agricultural implements and engineering and boiler works, large timber and saw mills and boat building yards. There is a very fine grey granite memorial at the end of the bridge, built by public subscription, in memory of the men who fell in the Great War, 1914-1918. The Corporation of Berwick, who are lords of the manor of Tweedmouth, and Robert W. Ramsey esq. are the principal landowners. The dock, opened 4th October, 1876, admits vessels up to 500 tons burthen, and has an area of 3½ acres and a depth of 21 feet; the cost of construction was about £35,000. There is railway communication from Tweedmouth station to the dock by a branch of the North Eastern railway. The parish church of St. Bartholomew, rebuilt in 1783 and enlarged in 1866, is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, with vestry, nave, north transept and a western tower with one bell: the church was new roofed and a porch added in 1907 at a cost of £800: there are 350 sittings. Population of the civil parish, inclusive of Spittal, was 4,965, and of the ecclesiastical parish (St. Bartholomew), 3,362. The area is 1,159 acres of land, 3 of inland and 53 of tidal water and 113 of foreshore. The rateable value, inclusive of Spittal, is £21,849.

SPITTAL, which derives its name from an ancient hospital once existing here, is an ecclesiastical parish, but part of the civil parish of Tweedmouth, and populous village, about three-quarters of a mile from Berwick, and is situated at the mouth of the river. The curing of herrings is largely carried on, and there is also a spade and shovel manufactory, and extensive manure works. The gas works for the borough of Berwick are in this parish, and belong to a limited company; the water works are also situated here. Many good houses have been built for the accommodation of visitors who resort hither for sea-bathing. There is also a valuable mineral spa, the waters of which contain iron, lime, magnesia and sulphate of soda. During 1894 a substantial sea-wall of concrete, about half a mile in length, was constructed. There is a motor boat and motor omnibus service between Berwick and Spittal. The church of St. John the Evangelist, consecrated in 1871, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, comprising chancel, nave and south aisle, and seats 350 persons. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £450, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle and the Mercers' Company alternately, and held since 1918 by the Rev. James Henry Cuthbertson B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. There is also a Presbyterian Church of England, a Congregational chapel, a meeting house for Christian Brethren, and a Mission Hall and Spittal Council schools. The Public Hall was erected by the Good Templars in 1885, and will seat 500 persons. The population of the ecclesiastical parish, St. John the Evangelist, in 1920 was 1,925.

ORD, a widely scattered place, by order of the Northumberland County Council, confirmed by a Local Government Board Order 26,635, dated 24 Feb. 1891, was constituted a separate parish for civil purposes, comprising East, Middle, and West Ord, being that part of the old civil parish of Tweedmouth outside the municipal borough of Berwick. BERWICKSHIRE Occupies the south-east angle of Scotland, lying along the river Tweed, which on the south divides it from Roxburghshire, and on the south-east from Northumberland; in shape it is somewhat of a pentagon, the other three sides being its east coast, which runs due north from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed to Eyemouth, where it turns to the west for a few miles, afterwards continuing its course north to St. Abb's Head, from which point it runs north-west to Cockburnspath, where it joins Haddingtonshire, which county bounds its fourth or north side, the fifth, the west, being bounded by Edinburghshire and Selkirkshire. The coast has no prominent harbours or sea lochs or any large bays; the county measures 34 miles from east to west and 23 from north to south, and comprises 292,535 acres of land. It had a population in 1901 of 30,824, and in 1911, 29,643, viz.:—Males, 14,192; females, 15,451. The inhabited houses in 1911 were 7,015; uninhabited, 441; and building, 21. In point of size Berwick ranks as the nineteenth Scottish county, and in population as the twenty-fourth.

Early History.—At the period of the Roman invasion Berwickshire was inhabited by tribes of British called "Otadinii;" and it was subsequently overrun by bands of Saxons, who engrafted their language and manners on those of the original inhabitants. The conquests by these foreigners extended a considerable way along the shores to the east and west; and in the course of time they gave the land of which they thus possessed themselves the title of Lothian, which it still retains in the western division. The entire area of Berwickshire was comprised in this Saxon territory, which was distinguished by the name of "Saxonia," superseding its previous designation "Bernicio." Until the year 1020 this district of country was included within the kingdom of Northumberland; in that year it was ceded to King Malcolm II. by Cospatrick, Earl of Northumberland, who settled in Scotland and was created Earl of Dunbar. About the beginning of the 11th century, many Norman and Anglo-Saxon families settled in Berwickshire, as well as other parts of Scotland. It is recorded as a fact that at Berwick-on-Tweed originated those laws which were framed and applied in Scotland for the regulation of burghs and their guild associations. Lying on the main route from England, Berwickshire suffered in the succeeding centuries in all the wars between the two hostile nations, and was occasionally involved in jurisdictional disputes with its ecclesiastical neighbour, the Palatine Bishop of Durham, and Berwick and the bridges across the Tweed were in general the main objects of contention. From the variety of successes and disasters which Berwickshire underwent for so many centuries, and from its successive occupation by different mixed nations, the people of this part of North Britain have not that distinct Scottish character so directly recognised in places more distant from the frontier. By their language and personal appearance, especially the former, the inhabitants of Berwick and its neighbourhood are easily particularised, and, in common with the Northumbrians, they speak with that remarkable "burr" which is found nowhere else in the kingdom. The "Men of Merse" distinguished themselves at Flodden and other bloody fields, under the command of Lord Home; and there is a tradition that a party, led to the Holy Land by some of their feudal chiefs, obtained on its ensanguined plains the highest honours for their unconquerable intrepidity. When Charles I. paid his first visit to Scotland, in the year 1633, Lord Home met him at Berwick with a train of 600 Merse gentlemen "gallantly arrayed" on horseback.

Surface, Soil &c.—Berwickshire is divided into three districts, namely Merse, Lammermoor (or Lammermuir), and Lauderdale. The Merse, so called from the word "march," or boundary, is the largest and most valuable district, occasionally giving name to the whole county, and embracing that tract of low land between the Lammermoor hills on the north and the river Tweed on the south, having Lauderdale for its western boundary. It is the most compact and extensive piece of level ground in Scotland, comprising 130,000 statute acres; in appearance it resembles a wide-spread portion of some of the English fertile counties, and is well enclosed and furnished with trees and plantations. Lammermoor, which consists of nearly 90,000 statute acres, is a highly pastoral district, with generally a wild, brown aspect, and runs on the northern border of the Merse, so as to divide the vales of Edinburgh and Haddington shires from the valley of the Tweed. The district of Lauderdale, which has received this title from the Leader water, along whose bank it ranges, is a mixture of hill and dale, the land in the valleys being essentially arable; this portion of the county contains about 67,000 statute acres.

The mountains lie mostly in the north-west of the county; none of them reach 2,000 feet above sea level, the highest being Crib Law, 1,670 feet; Blythe Edge, 1,521; Collie Law, 1,286; Riddel Law, 1,270 and Dun Law, 1,292.

Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—Within the last century very great exertions have been made to improve the agricultural character of the county, and in this respect it differs nothing from the neighbouring territory of East Lothian.

The chief crops in 1920, according to the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland," were:—Oats, 32,073 acres; barley, including bere, 20,543; wheat, 3,031; rye, 85; beans (to be harvested as corn), 679; total of corn crops, 56,443 acres; turnips and swedes, 23,330 acres; mangolds, 212; potatoes, 2,740; cabbage, 93; rape, 1,288; vetches or tares for seed, 32; vetches, tares, beans and mashlum &c. for fodder, 458; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 11,275; permanent grass (not for hay), 48,681.

The area of the county is 292,535 acres; mountain and heath land used for pasture being 75,956 acres; permanent grass, 48,681 acres; arable land, 141,578 acres.

The live stock in 1920 was:—Horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 3,871; stallions, 10; unbroken horses, one year and above, 699; under one year, 164; cows in milk, 2,477; cows in calf but not in milk, 270; heifers in calf, 594; other cattle, two years and above, 6,186; one year and under two, 5,810; under one year, 2,056; ewes kept for breeding, 111,127; other sheep, one year and above, 36,667; under one year, 146,558; sows kept for breeding, 522; other pigs, 3,082.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 138; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 97; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 70; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 55; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 43; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 38; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 62; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 148; above 300 acres, 247; total, 898.

The exports of Berwickshire consist of corn, sheep and eggs; and these, indeed, may be considered as the extent of its commerce. The only minerals raised in 1919 from quarries were igneous rock, 12,071 tons, and sandstone, 98 tons. The county is strictly pastoral and agricultural. Manufactures as yet have made little or no progress within its borders; what is connected with this system of industry finds its chief seat at the town of Berwick, on the borders. Paper is made at Chirnside Bridge, and the manufacture of woollens is carried on at Earlston and Cumledge. The herring fishery, which is pursued at Eyemouth and other ports, is a profitable industry, as is also the curing of this fish.

Rivers and Railways.—The rivers mostly flow from north-west to south; the Leader, Eden, Langton and the Black and White Adder all flow into the Tweed, while the Eye debouches into the North Sea at Eyemouth. The Tweed is a large river, but it is not capable of navigation; it is, however, of great value, from its salmon fisheries, which are under a strict system of water police. The Eden, which runs southwards from Lammermoor, has a remarkable fall, near the house of Newton Don, of about 40 feet, exhibiting a fine appearance when there is a flood. It is a peculiarity of the Blackadder that no salmon can live in it; if any happen to enter they are said to die in a few days, though they are caught plentifully in the Whiteadder, which also abounds with trout &c. The North British railway has the control of the lines in the county, entering it from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed, and passing north to Burnmouth (from which place is a line to Eyemouth), where it turns westward and north-west to Reston, whence there is a branch line running south-west through Edrom, Langton and Greenlaw to Earlston, and thence to St Boswells, the main line continuing on through Cockburnspath to Dunbar and Edinburgh; the southern and south-eastern portion of the county is supplied by the North Western railway, on the English side of the border, running via Norham Coldstream and Kelso.

Divisions and Representation.—Berwickshire comprehends (exclusive of Berwick town) 32 parishes and 30 complete and parts of 4 ecclesiastical parishes, forming the Presbyteries of Duns, Chirnside and Earlston, in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and contains 3 police burghs and 1 royal burgh, Lauder, which until under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to Parliament, but was then merged in the county, which was represented by one member in Parliament. Under the "Repre-entation of the People Act, 1918," Berwick and Haddington, inclusive of all the burghs situated therein, still return one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency for 1919 was 33,898.

ABBEY SAINT BATHANS is a parish, situated in the midst of the Lammermoor hills, 7 miles north-north-west from Duns, and 5 from Grant's House, the nearest railway station, on the east coast route of the North British railway, in the Duns small debt court district. The soil is light and dry, and on the banks of the Whitadder fertile and well cultivated; but the hilly district is barren and covered with heath. In this parish are the remains of a 7th century chapel dedicated to St. Bathan, and fragments of the Cistercian nunnery, founded circa 1180, form part of present Established church. Edins Ha', about a mile below St. Bathans, on the Whitadder, consists of a circular stone building, whose champered walls are from 15 to 20 feet thick. The enclosed internal diameter is about 55 feet and external diameter 92 feet. George Gillon Turnbull esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and owns most of the land. The parish has an area of 4,845 acres; rateable value, £2,294; the population in 1911 was 229 in the civil, and 188 in the ecclesiastical parish.

AYTON is a parish and village, 2½ miles south-west from Eyemouth and 8 north-west from Berwick; the village occupies a delightful situation on the left bank of the Eye, and has a station about a quarter of a mile distant, on the main line of the North British railway. It is lighted with gas from works the property of a company. A justice of the peace court is held here monthly, and a sheriff's court for the recovery of small debts four times a year. The Established church was erected in 1864-5, at a cost of about £7,000, near to the old fabric, then in a dilapidated state, and is an edifice in the English Gothic style of the 14th century, with a lofty tower, and affords nearly 500 sittings. There is also a United Free church. In the parish are various remains of ancient encampments, and urns and fragments of armour have been occasionally brought to the surface by the plough. Ayton Castle, to the east of the village, held a distinguished place during the Border wars, but was demolished by Thomas, Earl of Surrey, in 1497; it is now the residence of Mrs. Liddell-Grainger. The principal landowners are Mrs. Liddell-Grainger; Earl Brownlow and Henry D. Bell esq. The parish has an area of 6,700 acres; rateable value, £15,105; population in 1911, 1,577 of parish and 737 of ward.

BUNKLE (anciently "Bonkyl") and PRESTON form a parish in the Duns small debt court district, about 4 miles north-north-east from Duns station and the same from Reston station, both on the North British railway. During the 13th and 14th centuries the lands in the parish of Bonkyl were held by a family of the same name, and by marriage descended to Sir John Steward. The soil on the high lands towards the Lammermoor hills was at one time thin, dry and poor, but by the application of lime and marl it has been much improved. The rest of the parish, particularly on the banks of the Whitadder, is a fertile loam, and well cultivated. The Earl of Home D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor; Miss Helen Margaret Milne-Home, of Wedderburn, and Edwin Robert John Sandys-Lumsdaine esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 9,194 acres; rateable value, £9,098; population in 1911, 562.

CHIRNSIDE is a parish in the small debt court district of Ayton, and in Kelso poor combination, lying to the east of the Merse and on the north side of the Whitadder, and extending 4 miles in length by about 3 in breadth. The village, situated on an eminence affording extensive views, is 50 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 13½ north-north-east from Greenlaw, 9 north-west from Berwick and 6 north-east from Duns, and has a station 1 mile distant, on the North British railway; it consists of two streets, the buildings of which are for the most part detached and straggling, and extend nearly a mile in length, but in the upper part of the village are several good stone houses: an excellent supply of water is brought from about a mile distant. There is a reading room and library and a children's mission hall. Besides a church of the Establishment there is one United Free church. The estate of Ninewells, the family seat of the Humes, is in this neighbourhood, and David Hume, the celebrated historian, though born in Edinburgh, 26 April, 1711, was from his infancy brought up in this parish; the mansion is the property and residence of James Alexander Ross-Hume esq. D.L., J.P. In this locality are some remains of ancient encampments. Alexander Harold Mitchell-Innes esq. J.P., who is lord of the manor, Ralph Nicholas Lawson esq. and William Burrell esq. are the principal landowners. Area, 5,557 acres; the rateable value is £11,346; population in 1911, 1,508.

COCKBURNSPATH is a parish and village on the sea coast, in the Dunbar small debt court district and East Lothian poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, and is 35½ miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north from Greenlaw, 14 north from Duns, 8 south-east from Dunbar and 21 north-west from Berwick, on the road between Berwick and Dunbar. The shore is precipitous, presenting a line of cliffs about one hundred feet above the level of the sea; behind the cliffs the ground rises gently towards the hills, having many deep glens, or ravines, whose sides are sometimes sloping and covered with verdure; but the general appearance is rocky, with overhanging woods; one of these ravines is crossed by the Peaths, or Pease bridge, erected in 1779-82 from the designs of Mr. Henderson; it is 123 feet in height from the bottom of the Pease burn, which flows beneath, 300 feet in length and 15 feet wide. There are Established and United Free churches. The ruins of the church of Auld Cambus, formerly united with this parish, are still standing. The Public Hall, erected in 1883-4, will seat 250 persons. Nearly a quarter of a mile west of the bridge are the remains of an ancient castle, and many traces of camps are visible on the rising grounds. Fisher's Cove is a small fishing village about a mile north and consisting of some fifteen or twenty houses, and on the way down to the small boat harbour is a curious tunnelled passage, with branching caves extending a considerable way into the rock. Frank J. Usher esq. Sir Thomas Clement K.B.E. Andrew Clement esq. Sir George Grant Suttie bart. the Hunter trustees, Lady E. F. Miller and Mrs. Isa Hunter are the landowners. COLDINGHAM is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Ayton and in East Lothian poor combination; the parish is 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, lying on the coast of Berwickshire, and is bounded on the north and east by the North Sea and is much resorted to for sea bathing. The village, a burgh of barony, is 45 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 21 north-north-east of Greenlaw, 17 south-east of Dunbar, 13 north-north-east of Duns, 11 north-north-west of Berwick, 4 north-north-west from Ayton and about 3 miles from Reston station on the North British railway. The village, which consists of two or three small streets, meeting at a cross, stands on a small eminence in the centre of a fine valley, a short distance from the sea and near to St. Abb's Head, where a lighthouse was erected in 1862, and subsequently a building for fog signalling; here also is a Lloyd's signal station, and a coastguard station was erected in 1907. The Established church incorporates part of the fabric of the priory church; it was altered and restored in 1857 and affords 300 sittings; there is also a United Free church and a Public Hall. The Millerton Joint Hospital Board's Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected in 1896, at a cost of about £800, and contains 8 beds and 2 cots; a new administrative block was erected in 1911. St. Abb's is a village in this parish, with a United Free church. Coldingham Loch, about a mile west from St. Abb's and 250 feet above the sea level, is triangular in form and upwards of a mile in circumference, and covers about 30 acres. On the top of Earnsheugh, 440 yards north of the loch, are the ruins of two oblong British camps, called Tunlaw, or Townlaw. Fast Castle, in this neighbourhood, is supposed to be the place described as Wolf's Craig in Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." On the south side of the town stand the ruins of the once magnificent priory of Coldingham, rebuilt by King Edgar, who personally assisted at its consecration. All that now remains of it is the east gable and north side of the church, forming part of the modern parish kirk, and a few straggling fragments, including a small Saxon arch, part of the palace said to have been erected here by the royal founder of the priory. A nunnery was settled here in the 7th century, of which St. Ebba, the daughter and sister of kings, became abbess in 670. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Allan esq. R. C. Cowe esq. James Allan esq. Major Finlay, Capt. Stirling Cookson, John Usher, Miss Milne Home, the Earl of Home, the trustees of the late George Denholm esq. and the North British Railway Co. The area of the parish comprises 25,365 acres; rateable value, £26,673; population, 1911, 2,749 in the civil parish and 1,479 in the ecclesiastical parish.

COLDSTREAM

COLDSTREAM, anciently called Lennel, is a police burgh and parish on the north bank of the Tweed and in Kelso poor combination; the town is 1½ miles from Cornhill station on the Kelso branch of the North Eastern railway, 47 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 14 south-south-west from Berwick, 10 south-east from Greenlaw, the like distance south from Duns, and 9 north-east from Kelso. The streets are in general spacious and well paved and contain many good houses, and the town is lighted with gas and supplied with water under a scheme carried out by the Town Council. The Tweed is crossed about 220 yards east of the town by a bridge of freestone, erected in 1766, at a cost of about £7,000, from the plans of Mr. John Smeaton, the famous engineer, and the designer, in 1759, of the former Eddystone lighthouse. It consists of seven arches, including two for abutments, and is 305 feet long and 25 feet wide. In 1830 it underwent a thorough repair, at a cost of about £2,000. From this bridge a very delightful view is afforded, both up and down the river. The town is governed by a Council, consisting of a provost, 2 bailies, 6 councillors and magistrates. Justices of peace courts are held as occasion requires, and sheriff small debt courts four times a year. The Town Hall is in the High street; there is also a Working Men's Club and a Mechanics' Institution, erected in High street in 1863, at a cost of £1,200, and containing a large lecture room, library, reading rooms &c. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and of the British Linen Bank. There are Established and United Free churches, both of which were rebuilt in 1907, the latter by Mrs. Agnes Black, of Lanton. The Episcopal church of St. Mary and All Souls seats 140 persons. There is also a Catholic Apostolic church. In the Market place stands a fountain, erected by the late Sir John Marjoribanks bart. (d. 1884), in connection with the waterworks, and near the church is an obelisk, erected by the inhabitants as a memorial to the donor of the water supply, who died 18 Nov. 1884. At the east end of the town is a memorial, erected by the friends of the late Charles Marjoribanks esq. sometime M.P. for Berwickshire (d. 1833), to record the successful result of the contested election for the county in 1832. The Tweed bridge occupies the site of an ancient ford, by which Edward I. entered Scotland with his forces in 1296; it was generally used during the border wars both by the English and Scottish forces, and last by a Scottish army in 1640, when the Scots crossed the border by this means, Aug. 20, in their advance against Charles I. This neighbourhood is the scene of most of the incidents in Sir Walter Scott's "Marmion," and here was raised in 1660, by Gen. Monk, the famous regiment still known as the "Coldstream Guards," and now forming the 2nd regiment of Foot Guards. During the winter season Coldstream is much resorted to by the nobility and gentry for foxhunting; the Duke of Buccleuch's and the Berwickshire and East Lothian packs meet regularly in the neighbourhood. Lees is the residence of Sir George John Marjoribanks K.C.V.O. and Lennel that of Major Walter Waring M.P. while to the north-west is The Hirsel, the seat of the Earl of Home D.L., J.P., T.D. The principal landowners are the Earl of Home, Major Walter Waring M.P. Sir George John Marjoribanks K.C.V.O., J.P. J. B. Hotham esq. and Admiral Sir William Henry May G.C.B., G.C.V.O. The area of the parish comprises 8,325 acres; rateable value, burghal £7,616, landward £12,392; the population in 1911 was 2,192, including 1,375 in the burgh.

DUNS, OR DUNSE

DUNS (or Dunse) is a parish and burgh of barony, in Kelso poor combination, with a station about half a mile east on the North British railway, and is 45 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 15 west from Berwick, 11 south-west from Ayton and 8 north-north-east from Greenlaw. The present town is built on a fine plain, under the southern slope of Duns Law, upon which hill the old town, destroyed by fire, formerly stood; the plain of Duns, 25 miles long, is encompassed on three sides by the Lammermoor ridge, and the river Whitadder, which produces the finest trout, flows past it. Duns Law, at the back of the town, rises to the height of about 500 feet, and the scenery from its summit is strikingly beautiful.

Duns is a place of great antiquity; but from its situation near the border, it was frequently subject to irruptions by the English, and on one of these occasions the town records were burnt, and its early history lost. The present town is generally well built, and is lighted with gas supplied by a local company, and with water by the Town Council. Under the provisions of the General Police and Improvement Act, 1862, and the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, the town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, forming the Town Council; the property vested in the feuars is managed by a committee of nine members, and a sheriff small debt and debts recovery court is held eight times in the year, viz., the last Friday in January, February, March, May, June and November, the second Friday in July and the first Friday in October, at which debt claims of limited amount are adjudicated; the ordinary sheriff court is also held every Friday, except during the vacations, which are regulated by the Sheriff Court Act. The parish church, burnt down in February, 1879, was rebuilt on a larger scale by the heritors of the parish, at a cost of upwards of £4,000, and re-opened in December, 1880. There are three United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church, called Christ Church, built in 1854, will seat 220 persons, and attached to it is a small mission hall at Chirnside. The Rev. Anselm Ashley is the present rector. The Town Hall, standing in the centre of the market place, was originally founded by the Earl of Moray, but the present hall, a building in the Gothic style, was erected in 1816 by the feuars, assisted by subscriptions. The County buildings, in Newtown street, contain the police station, and were considerably enlarged in 1895; here the courts are held. There is a Free Library, a Working Men's Institute and a Masonic Hall. A Unionist club, in Golden square, contains reading and billiard rooms. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank. The trade is chiefly in flour and grain. There are two hotels, viz., the White Swan and the Black Bull. A sale by auction is held every alternate Monday for cattle. A fair for hiring servants is held the first Tuesday in March, and single hirings are held on the first Tuesday in May and November. The fine public park was formed in 1895; the land was presented to the town by the late Andrew Smith esq. of Whitchester, and the expense of laying it out was wholly defrayed by the late Sir James Percy Miller bart. of Manderston. Duns Castle, a fine modern mansion in the castellated style, stands about half a mile north-west of the town. The ancient edifice was erected about 1320 by Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, the nephew and co-patriot of Bruce, and was restored and considerably enlarged in 1820 by its then proprietor, Col. Hay, but is now the seat of Francis Stuart Hay esq. J.P. and contains some fine paintings, including some from the Seton gallery, also a group representing George, 5th Baron Seton, the attached friend of Queen Mary, surrounded by his family, as also several portraits of the Stuarts, presented by the exiled Royal family to an ancestor of Mr. Hay. The learned and celebrated metaphysician and theologist, Joannes Duns Scotus, was born here about 1265, and died at Cologne, 8th Nov. 1308. The Rev. Thomas Boston, author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold State," and other works, was born here, 7th March, 1676; d. 20th May, 1732; Abraham Robertson LL.D. professor of astronomy at Oxford, and Thomas M'Crie D.D.Edin. were likewise born here. Francis S. Hay esq. D.L., J.P. of Duns Castle, who is lord of the manor, the trustees of the late Sir James Percy Miller bart. D.L., J.P. (d. 1906), and the trustees of the Hon. Mrs. Baillie-Hamilton are the chief landowners. The area comprises 11,404 acres; rateable value, £23,470; the population in 1911 was 3,042, of which 2,069 were in the burgh.

At CUMLEDGE, about 2 miles north from Duns, a hamlet in that parish, there is a large steam and water mill for the manufacture of blankets.

EARLSTON (anciently "Ercildoun") is a parish and village, with a station on the North British railway, 31 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 12 west-by-north from Kelso, 18 south-west from Duns, 15 north from Jedburgh, 10 south-west from Greenlaw, 8½ north-east from Galashiels and 7 south from Lauder; in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court of Lauder. The village is seated in a rich valley encompassed by hills of a moderate height, interspersed with thriving plantations; the Leader river flows on the west of the parish, and the Eden on the east. The manufacture of woollens and ginghams is carried on here, and the latter have a high reputation for excellence of quality. At the west end of the village, on the bank of the Leader, are the ruins of an old tower, once the residence of Sir Thomas Learmouth, commonly called "the Rhymer," who flourished in the 13th century. A stone in the wall of the church bears the following inscription in ancient characters, "Auld Rhymer's race lies in this place." Cowdenknowes, the residence of Colonel Charles Hope J.P. is an ancient building, standing on the side of a hill. Mellerstein is the seat of the Earl of Haddington M.C. and Carolside, the residence of Mrs. Mitchell. There are two fairs—on the 29th of June and the third Thursday in October, for cattle and horses, and a cattle and sheep market, and also a corn market every alternate Monday. Redpath is a village in this parish. The area comprises 9,808 acres; rateable value, £14,887; the population in 1911 was 1,749 in the civil parish and 1,755 in the ecclesiastical parish, 6 being in Roxburghshire.

EYEMOUTH is an ancient and seaport burgh of barony and a parish, with a terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and is 50 miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north-east from Greenlaw, 21 south-east from Dunbar, 20 north from Coldstream and 8 north-north-west from Berwick, on the estuary of the Eye. It was known as a port as early as the reign of Alexander II. (1214-49). Shipping can lie at anchor in the haven secure from all winds except the north and north-east, or when the passage cannot be effected up the Frith of Forth. The herring fishery is a source of profitable employment to the greater part of the inhabitants, there being 100 boats and steam drifters belonging to this port employed during the season. The trustees of the harbour obtained the sum of £25,000 from the Public Works Loan Commissioners for improvements of the harbour, completed in 1887, and a further sum of £10,000 has been advanced by the Fishery Board of Scotland for the improvement of the entrance. The port was added to the Berwick-on-Tweed Customs port in August, 1847. The St. Ebbe Lodge of Master Masons and the Land o' Cakes Royal Arch Chapter hold their meetings here in a lodge room established in 1757; it was in this room that Burns, the poet, was made a Royal Arch Mason. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Ebba has Ayton mission annexed. There are also Evangelical Union Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. On a small promontory on the coast here are the remains of a regular fortification, supposed to have been constructed by a French officer entrusted with the command of the troops of the Queen Regent. The principal landowners are Miss Helen Margaret Milne-Home, Mrs. Sandison and Mrs. Margaret Mickle. The area comprises 1,087 acres; rateable value, £8,950; the population in 1911 was 2,561, including 2,452 in the burgh; area of burgh, 192 acres; rateable value, £10,630; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 2,561.

GORDON is a parish and village, in Kelso poor combination and in the small debt court district of Duns, 5 miles south-west from Greenlaw, on the road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and about a quarter of a mile from Gordon station on the North British railway. The river Eden intersects the parish, which extends 7 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Public Hall capable of seating about 350. Upper Huntlywood and Nether Huntlywood, the names of two farms in the parish, each claim the honour of giving the title of Marquess and Earl of Huntly to the Gordon family, and until 1836 Dukes of Gordon. Greenknowe Tower, a venerable structure, the property of Major Arthur Dalrymple Forbes-Gordon, of Langlee, Galashiels, was frequently used in ancient times by the inhabitants as a place of refuge from incursions of the English. In 1920 a public park was opened as a memorial to Thomas Henderson esq. an East Indian tea planter. A Fever Hospital and Consumptive Sanatorium for 30 patients was erected in 1910. Major A. D. Forbes-Gordon is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 9,722 acres; rateable value, £10,417; the population in 1911 was 711.

GREENLAW is a parish and town with a station on the North British railway, 37 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 20 west from Berwick, 12 east from Lauder, 6½ south-west from Duns and 10 north-west from Coldstream. It is situated in a valley, on the north bank of the Blackadder, which is here crossed by two bridges; the town consists of one long street, with a large square or green. Old Greenlaw was 1 mile to the south, but of this place no traces now remain. Greenlaw was constituted the head burgh of the county by a royal charter, granted in 1596, and confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1696. There is an Established church; the town is governed by a Parish Council, and the County Buildings, standing in the Market square, which were erected in 1831, and presented to the shire by the late Sir W. H. Campbell, now belong to the Parish Council and are used as a Town Hall. The justices' court sits at Duns. The surface of the land is for the most part level, rising occasionally into slight detached eminences. Sheep walks, moorlands, and soil adapted to turnips and grain crops are the main characteristics of the land. Sir John Home-Purves-Hume-Campbell bart. James Marjoribanks esq. and Moffat Scott Thomson esq. M.A. are the principal landowners. Area, 12,158 acres; rateable value, £11,520; the population in 1911 was 941.

HOUNDWOOD is a quoad sacra parish and district forming the southern portion of the large civil parish of Coldingham, and contains the villages of Reston, Auchencrow and Grant's House. The place derives its name from a person named Grant, the contractor for making the high road to Edinburgh, who erected a cottage for himself, now called Grant's House Hotel. There is a United Free church here, opened in March, 1888.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,249.

HUME is a small village and parish which with Stitchel (Roxburghshire) forms a joint ecclesiastical parish, in the small debt court district of Duns. The nearest railway station is Greenlaw, on the North British railway, 3 miles distant. The remains of Hume Castle, a noted fortress during the Border wars, stand on a bold eminence commanding extensive and picturesque views over the greater portion of the Merse and Roxburghshire. The soil is very rich and fertile and in a high state of cultivation. There is a burial ground near the village, but no place of worship, the church being at Stitchel; little more than grass-grown mounds mark the site of a church which was in ruins in 1637. Mr. Archibald Veitch and Mr. James Deuchar are the landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,103 acres; rateable value, £4,153; the population of the civil parish is 298 and of the ecclesiastical parish 561, of which 275 are in Stitchel, Roxburghshire.

LADYKIRK, anciently called "Upsettlington," is a parish and village in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court district of Duns, with a railway station at Norham, about 1½ miles distant, on the North Eastern system; the soil of the district, which is naturally good, has been greatly enriched by careful cultivation, and the parish is celebrated for its breeds of cattle and sheep; the parish lies on the north bank of the Tweed, with that of Hutton on the north-east and Whitsome and Swinton on the west, and it has a breadth of from 1 to 2 miles; a stone bridge, constructed at the expense of the Tweed Bridges Trust, here spans the Tweed between Ladykirk and Norham. The church, a venerable building, standing near the Tweed, is said to have been erected by James IV. (1488-1513) in gratitude for his preservation from the violence of the flood when fording the river here at the head of his army, and dedicated by him to "Our Lady;" hence it was denominated "Ladykirk," a name subsequently extended to the village, in which stands a fountain given by Lady Marjoribanks in commemoration of the fiftieth year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, 1887. The small village of Horndean belongs to this parish. Ladykirk House is the seat of the Hon. Mrs. Askew-Robertson. Mrs. Askew-Robertson, Berwick J. Black esq. and the trustees of the late Alexander Wellwood Rattray are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,382 acres; rateable value, £6,777; population in 1911, 315.

The parish church, locally in Gavinton, and standing on an eminence, has a tower with spire, and was restored in 1873, at a cost of about £2,000; there is also a United Free church. LAUDER

LAUDER is an ancient royal burgh and the capital of the district of Lauderdale, and a parish, in Kelso poor combination, with a railway station on the Lauder branch of the North British railway, 25 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 35 west of Berwick, 21 north of Jedburgh, 22 south-west of Coldstream, 20 south-west of Duns, 17 south-west of Kelso and 12 west of Greenlaw. The town is situated in the vale of the Leader, on the main road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and consists principally of a single thoroughfare, at the west end of which is the town house, and it is lighted with gas by a company. The charter constituting Lauder a royal burgh was renewed in 1502, and the government vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, chosen annually by the electors of the district. A justice of the peace court is held as occasion requires. By the Reform Act of 1832, Lauder was joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to Parliament, but, under the provisions of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885" (48 and 49 Vict. c. 23), the representation was merged in that of the county. Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Lauder is in the Berwick and Haddington division. The trade is chiefly local and domestic, and there is a branch here of the Bank of Scotland. The principal hotels are the Black Bull and the Eagle, and there is also a temperance hotel. The Established church, a cruciform building standing on the south of the town house, was erected in 1673, when John (Maitland), first and only Duke of Lauderdale, removed the more ancient church from the vicinity of his residence; there is also a United Free church. Thirlestane Castle, a massive and spacious mansion, surrounded by a park and some fine woods, is the seat of Viscount Maitland; the castle, which stands between the Leader and the town, on a fine lawn, is fitted and decorated in the style of the time of Charles II. and contains a number of elaborately carved marble chimney-pieces and a collection of valuable paintings, chiefly portraits. The parish of Lauder contains 33,616 acres; rateable value, £18,240; the population in 1911 was 1,336, including 659 in the royal burgh.

MERTOUN is a parish in Berwickshire abutting on Roxburghshire and extending 6 miles along the banks of the Tweed, and is in Galashiels poor combination and in Duns small debt court district. Clintmains is a small village in the parish, and about 1½ miles from St. Boswells village, and 3 from St. Boswells station on the North British railway. The parish church and manse are locally in Clintmains. The famous ruins of Dryburgh Abbey, situated in this parish, are much frequented by tourists as being the burial place of Sir Walter Scott, who was here interred 26 Sept. 1832. There was a monastic house here in the 6th century, but the later structure was built during the period 1150-52 by Hugh de Morville, constable of Scotland, and Beatrice his wife, for Premonstratensian, or White, Canons, and was colonized from the abbey of St. Mary at Alnwick: the original Norman is intermixed with Early English and Early Decorated work, and there remain portions of the cruciform church, the chapter house, the chapel of St. Modanus, and fragments of the domestic buildings, including a fine gable of the refectory. At a short distance from the abbey is a temple of the Ionic order, built by David, 11th Earl of Buchan, about 1817; surmounting the dome is a bust of James Thomson, the author of "The Seasons," who was born at Ednam in 1700; on the way from Dryburgh to Bemersyde is a colossal statue of Sir William Wallace, erected by Lord Buchan in 1814. The modern Dryburgh Abbey, the property of Lord Glenconner, is at present occupied by Lady Orr-Ewing; Bemersyde House by Capt. the Hon. Francis C. Montgomerie and Dryburgh House by Miss Baillie. Mertoun House is the seat of the Earl of Ellesmere M.V.O. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 6,523 acres; rateable value, £8,769; the population in 1921 was 500.

MORDINGTON is a parish and village in the south-eastern part of the county, and about 1 mile from Foulden. In the mansion house here, Cromwell established his quarters on passing the Tweed for the first time. There is an Established church. At Lamberton Toll, on the boundary of the parish, is a hamlet in which, but within the Scottish border, marriages were solemnized in the same summary manner, and on precisely the same principles, as at Gretna. Edrington Castle is the name given to a camp situate on the top of a steep rock overlooking the river Whiteadder; on the "Witches' Knowe," an eminence 649 feet in height, several unfortunate women were at one time burned for witchcraft. Ironstone has been discovered in the parish, and coal on the estate of Robert Charles Campbell-Renton esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor and also the chief landowner. The area comprises 2,940 acres; rateable value, £4,989; the population in 1911 was 292.

PAXTON, see HUTTON.

POLWARTH is a parish and village in the district of Merse and in the small debt court district of Duns; the village is 1½ miles from MARCHMONT on the North British railway, 40 south-east from Edinburgh, 4 south-west from Duns, and about 3½ north-east from Greenlaw, on the road between Greenlaw and Edinburgh. On the green of Polwarth, in the centre of the village, an ancient custom prevailed for every newly-married pair, with their company, to dance round an old thorn tree, and the custom is still kept up to a great extent. This place now gives the title of baron to the Hepburne-Scott family. The parish church, an ancient building, stands about a mile south-east of the village, and on the front is a Latin inscription, affirming that it was erected anterior to the year 900. In a vault below the church Sir Patrick Hume, or Home, of Polwarth, created in 1697 Earl of Marchmont, and sometime Chancellor of Scotland, found an asylum from the fury of his persecutors, when a price was set upon his head, till arrangements were made for his escape to Holland. The estate of Polwarth formerly belonged to Sinclair, of Hermandston, whose family, so far back as the 15th century, terminated in two coheiresses, who married two brothers of the Home family, and the lands of Polwarth were then divided between the two Homes. The mansion, together with the estate, is now the property of Robert Finnie McEwen esq. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Area, 2,999 acres; rateable value, £3,074; the population in 1911 was 197.

There is a Free Library in the village and on the village green stands an old market cross. Simprim is a small village in the south-east part of the parish. The Rev. BUTESHIRE

BUTESHIRE is composed of the islands of Bute, Arran, Great and Little Cumbray (or Cumbrae), Holy Isle, Pladda, and Inch-Marnoch, covering 139,658 acres of land and 794 of water. In point of size it ranks as the twenty-ninth, and in population as the thirtieth of Scotch counties. Though far separated from the properly denominated Western Islands, those of Bute statistically constitute a portion of the Hebrides. Bute, the most northerly of the islands, lies in a bay formed by the lower end of the district of Cowal, Argyllshire, from which it is separated by the narrow straits known as the Kyles of Bute, its southern part lying between the northern portions of Ayrshire and Cantire. Arran occupies the southern part of the Firth of Clyde, south-west of Bute and opposite to the east coast of Cantire, from which it is divided by the Kilbrennan sound; the Greater and Lesser Cumbrae lie between the island of Bute and the coast of Ayr. Inch-Marnoch is off the west coast of Bute and Holy Island and Pladda off the coast of Arran. The coast line is for the most part rocky, and has comparatively few harbours. The population of the county in 1901 was 18,787, and in 1911, 18,186, viz.: males, 8,009; females, 10,177. The number of houses was: inhabited, 4,357; uninhabited, 2,153; 23 building.

Early History.—The islands formed part of the Norwegian kingdom until 1263, when Alexander III. recovered these islands and Ayrshire from Haco, whom he defeated at the battle of Largs. Robert Bruce came to Arran from Ireland previous to his descent on Ayrshire. Robert II. created his eldest son Duke of Rothesay, and James II. conferred Arran with the title of Earl on his favourite Lord Boyd, and afterwards transferred it to Sir James Hamilton, his daughter's second husband. Bute gives the title of Marquess to the family of Stuart, a branch of the royal family of Scotland. The Marquess of Bute is descended in a direct line from Sir John Stuart, a son of Robert II., who by his father's grant became possessed of the island of Bute, with the heritable jurisdiction of the county, in which he was confirmed by a charter of his brother, Robert III. The family was elevated to an earldom in the person of Sir James, a privy councillor of Queen Anne, in 1703. The island of Bute at one time contained ten or twelve parish churches, and about thirty hermitages of religious men; the island has now but three parishes, and the shire altogether only six. The soil is chiefly red sandstone and trap, the former showing along the coast, where it is surrounded by a belt of gravel.

The climate of Buteshire is eminently salubrious; neither mists nor noxious fogs, so prevalent in the east of Scotland, infest it; snow rarely lies on the hills, and the only qualification to its general genial character is a liability to severe and sudden rains. In the interior, in a secluded situation, the celebrated tragedian, Edmund Kean, erected a cottage, to which he purposed retiring from public life. The island has for many years been the place of summer resort for seabathing.

The interior of Arran has a lofty chain of hills, but Bute is more flat in surface.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for 1920," are:—Oats, 5,194 acres; barley, including bere, 51; rye, 37; beans, to be harvested as corn, 42; peas, 2; total corn crops, 5,356 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,286 acres; potatoes, 1,293; mangolds, 9; cabbage, 12; rape, 174; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 7,382 acres; bare fallow, 83 acres. The area of the county is 139,658 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 70,320 acres; permanent grass, 9,960; arable lane, 15,628 acres.

The live stock in 1920 included 923 horses, solely for agriculture and brood mares; other horses, 404; cows in milk, 2,878; cows in calf, but not in milk, 306; heifers in calf, 403; other cattle, two years and above, 1,518; one year and under two, 2,196; under one year, 2,193; ewes kept for breeding, 16,813; other sheep, one year and above, 7,151; under one year, 13,915; sows kept for breeding, 58; other pigs, 569.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 71; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 144; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 119; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 69; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 33; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 29; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 37; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 30; above 300 acres, 5; total, 546.

The only minerals raised in 1919 were 700 tons of sandstone and 2,328 tons of igneous rocks. Some portion of the inhabitants are employed in fishery, but the pursuits are mainly pastoral.

The rivers are none of them of any magnitude, the largest being the Iorsa and Machry in Arran, both debouching on the west coast after a course of five or six miles; the principal fresh water lochs are Loch Fad in Bute and Lochs Iorsa and Tanna in Arran; there are no railways, but there is regular communication by steamer with Glasgow.

The shire comprises six parishes, and there are ten ecclesiastical parishes and part of one parish; there is one Royal burgh, Rothesay, and a Police burgh, Millport. The parliamentary representation consists of one member for the county. The constituency for 1919 was 40,469.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT FOR THE COUNTY.

THE ISLE OF ARRAN is divided into two parishes, Kilbride and Kilmory; it embraces an area of 106,149 statute acres, and contained a population in 1901 of 4,837 and in 1911, 4,628. Arran is lofty and mountainous, some of its peaks exceeding 3,000 feet in altitude. A small portion of the lower grounds is cultivated, but the whole is essentially and characteristically pastoral. The island is noted for its herring fishery, but this industry is pursued by only a comparatively small portion of the inhabitants, and chiefly at the north end. The staple industry of the island is agriculture, which, under the care of the Arran Farmers' Society, has attained to a degree of comparative excellence. The majority of the inhabitants are occupiers of small plots of land. The smaller tenants find house letting a ready source of income during the summer season. As a summer resort the island is held in high reputation, for, besides possessing a highly salubrious climate, it presents ample opportunities for boating, sea and trout fishing, botanical and geological researches and kindred outdoor pursuits. All the streams, many of which afford tolerably good sport to the careful angler, are free to all comers, except two in the neighbourhood of Dubhgharadh Shooting Lodge. Game is abundant, but excursionists are allowed to ramble, and prosecution for trespass is unknown on the island. A good road runs along the shore for the whole circuit of the island, a distance of 55¼ miles, and two roads run across from shore to shore—one from Lagg to Lamlash and the other from Shiskine to Brodick; of the shore road 24 miles are within the limits of Kilbride parish, and the remaining 31¼ miles within Kilmory parish. Plantations of considerable extent and growth, created by the Duke of Hamilton, form a special feature of attraction in various localities, the beautiful and wooded glen of Lagg, in Kilmory parish, and other sequestered spots, presenting a combination of varied and attractive scenery. The island is copiously watered by the numerous streams issuing on either side from the great rocky range extending from north to south, and has some considerable eminences, including Ben Bharrain, 2,393 feet; Ben Tarsuinn, 2,706 feet; the Peaks of the Castles, 2,735 feet, and Goatfell, 2,866 feet. On the south-west coast are several caves, including the King's Cave, which is 120 feet long, 60 high and 48 feet wide. The parish of Kilbride occupies rather less than one half of the island on the east side, extending 19 miles in length by a breadth of from four to six. This parish, and others of the same name, derived their designation from Saint Bride, or Bridget, a saint whose fame extended over the whole of Britain. The ruins of the old church of Kilbride still remain, and in the east wall is a slab bearing the coronet of a marquess, and the date 1618: in the churchyard lie a number of mutilated slabs: the present parish church is locally in the village of Lamlash, and was erected in 1784, and rebuilt in 1885 at the cost of the 12th Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895). Lamlash Bay is one of the best in the west of Scotland, and affords a secure anchorage to vessels driven by stress of weather from the Irish Channel. The haven forms a natural basin, protected by the rocky islet of Holy Island lying at its mouth. The village lies on the inner side of the bay, and has a branch of the Bank of Scotland, a good inn, called the Lamlash Hotel, and a golf club. In the parish are some tall monoliths, which are supposed to be fragments of stone circles. Fairs are held here in the months of April and October. The area of Kilbride is 38,013 acres; rateable value, £16,295; population in 1911 was 2,451, including 84 shipping and 18 on Holy Island, in the civil parish and 804 in the ecclesiastical parish.

WHITING BAY is on the south-west of the island, and has Established, United Free and Free churches, an inn and a temperance hotel. It was formed into a quoad sacra parish March 19th, 1908, from Kilbride and Kilmory. Population in 1911, 787.

BRODICK is a village and a quoad sacra parish, separated for ecclesiastical purposes from that of Kilbride, and has Established and United Free and Free churches. A pier was erected over 50 years ago, and in the village is a good family hotel, built by the 12th Duke of Hamilton, and facing the pier; it has spacious grounds, and affords a splendid view of Brodick Bay, Goatfell mountain (2,866 feet), and Glenrosa, together with the coasts of Ayrshire; here also is a public hall and a sub-branch of the Bank of Scotland. Brodick Castle, the property of the Marchioness of Graham O.B.E. stands on a rocky terrace, which rises from the north side of the bay, and is the residence of the Marquis of Graham C.B., C.V.O.; this terrace forms a part of a peninsular elevation, or shoulder, projecting from the base of Goatfell mountain. The Marchioness of Graham O.B.E. is superior of the island. Fairs are held at Brodick on the first Tuesday after the 20th of June. The population in 1911 was 1,128.

CORRIE, in Kilbride parish, is on the north-east of the island, and has Established, Free and Congregational churches, and an hotel. There is also a Congregational church at Sannox, 2 miles north of Corrie.

The parish of Kilmory ("Cill Mhuire," i.e. "Mary's Church,") occupies fully more than half the island of Arran on its western and south-eastern sides. The land in this parish is extremely productive. Dairy produce is abundant, and fair crops are obtained from large fields well laid out with good fences. The hills are of moderate height, and so accessible to culture that every spot is convertible to use. The church, situated on an eminence about half a mile from the hamlet of Lagg, was rebuilt on or near the old site by the 12th Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895), at a cost of £1,300; there are remains of a font and some ancient slabs. In the wall of the Clachan Established church is built a slab with an effigy of, it is believed, St. Mohos, the patron saint of the island. At Clachan, on the west side of the island, are traces of a chapel. The principal hotel is the Hamilton Arms. Area of the parish, 67,136 acres; rateable value, £12,590; population in 1911, 2,177 in the civil parish and 1,908 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The ISLAND OF PLADDA, which lies off the south of Arran, and has a lighthouse on it, is in this parish. Population in 1911, 8.

SHISKINE and BLACKWATERFOOT are places on the south-west of the island, and have Established, United Free and Free churches.

LOCHRANZA, on the extreme north-west, has Established, United Free and Free churches.

KILDONAN, part of which is in the quoad sacra parish of Whiting Bay, is on the south-west, and has United Free and Free churches, and an inn.

ASCOG, see ISLE OF BUTE.

THE ISLE OF BUTE

THE ISLE OF BUTE consists of the parishes of Kingarth, North Bute and Rothesay, in the latter of which is the royal burgh of Rothesay, the capital of the island and county; the island lies south of the main portion of Argyllshire, a little below the mouth of the Clyde, and is bounded on its eastern side and southern point by the Firth of Clyde, on the west by the mouth of Loch Fyne and the Sound of Bute; it is about 18 miles in length, with an average breadth of 5 miles. Towards Cowal it is bleak and mountainous, but in the southern parts it consists of green fertile eminences or low hills, either affording excellent pasture or capable of being cultivated so as to produce fine crops of potatoes, oats &c. The parish of KINGARTH occupies the southern and south-eastern portion of the island, and extends about 9 miles from north to south, by 4 in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Rothesay and contains the village of Kilchattan and the hamlets of Kerrycroy, Piperhill and Kingarth, and at Kingarth is a Public Library. Mount Stuart, about 5 miles south-east of Rothesay and 4 north from Kilchattan, is the seat of the Marquess of Bute, who is the principal landowner.

KILCHATTAN, or Kilchattan Bay, is a village, beautifully situated on a bay, in the parish of Kingarth and in the Rothesay small debt court district, about 8 miles south of Rothesay, and has a pier. The parish church of Kingarth, situated here, was built in 1826, and has sittings for 450 persons. Here also is a United Free church and a hotel, and near the village a cluster of monoliths. Half a mile from the east shore are the remains of a stone circle, and towards the west shore, and also near the north-east shore of the bay, are several other interesting remains: on the north-west, at the southern point of St. Ninian's bay, are traces of a chapel, and at Blair's ferry stand the remains of St. Michael's chapel, about 25 feet in length, with a burial ground; and south of it a group of seven large stones, called "St. Michael's grove." At St. Calmaig stands a tall slab, nearly 5 feet in height, carved near the top with a cross potent in a sunk circle, the stem being simply incised. Off the west coast is the island of Inch Marnoch, about 2 miles in length, which once also had a chapel and cemetery. In the neighbourhood of Kilchattan is the curious promontory of Garrochhead, and about a mile to the north-west of it, in a quiet romantic dell, stand the remains of the church, or chapel of St. Blane, a structure of the Late Norman and Early Gothic periods, consisting of chancel and nave, together about 77 feet long internally: the west end is gone, and the side walls much reduced, but the east end retains its gable and has two lancet windows, and on the south side of the chancel is a similar window, a piscina and an aumbry: the chancel arch has shafts with cushioned caps, and zigzag ornament both on the inner and outer faces; attached is an ancient and interesting churchyard.

ASCOG, situated on a fine bay, about 3 miles south-east from Rothesay and in the parish of Kingarth, contains many elegant mansions and villas, and on a point of rock jutting out into the water stands a United Free church, in the burial ground of which rest the remains of Montagus Stanley, a Scottish painter, who died in 1844. At the extreme south end of the island, above Dunnagoil Bay, 1 mile south-west from St. Blane's chapel, there stands an extensive vitrified fort.

KERRYCROY is a hamlet 4 miles south-east from Rothesay, pleasantly situated on Scoulag Bay, the village forming a crescent round the strand, and having a Public Library. The entrance to Mount Stuart policies commences here, and in the village is a school.

The area of Kingarth is 8,990 acres; rateable value, £10,348; population in 1911, 967 in the civil and 803 in the ecclesiastical parish.

NORTH BUTE. This parish occupies the northern portion of the island, bounded by the Kyles of Bute, and extends 7 miles from north to south, by 3 to 4 in breadth; it contains the village of Kamesburgh, or Port Bannatyne, and the hamlet of Straad, and also the small island of Inch Marnock.

PORT BANNATYNE, the popular name for Kamesburgh, is a port and village, in the parish of North Bute, and 2¼ miles north from Rothesay. The port possesses a small quay and pier, and there are several furnished houses, occupied principally by families who make this place a summer retreat. The church of North Bute, nearly a mile west, was erected in 1836 at a cost of £1,000, defrayed by John, 2nd Marquess of Bute K.T. and there is also a United Free church. St. Ninian's chapel of ease, in connection with the Established church, was opened in July, 1886, at a cost of about £5,000. Half a mile distant is the ancient castle of Kames, the property of the Marquess of Bute K.T. now (1921) unoccupied. Here is an hotel. The Marquess of Bute K.T. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 18,569 acres; rateable value, £18,185; population in 1911, 1,585, including 960 in Port Bannatyne in the civil and 1,418 in the ecclesiastical parish.

NORTH BUTE, see ISLE OF BUTE.

THE ISLES OF CUMBRAE

THE ISLES OF GREAT AND LITTLE CUMBRAE. These islands lie off the coast of Ayrshire, in the Firth of Clyde, between the parishes of West Kilbride in Ayrshire and Kingarth in the island of Bute, and comprise the parish of Cumbrae. MILLPORT, in Cumbrae parish, is a burgh, constituted in 1864, under the Act 23 and 24 Vic. cap. 96. It is chiefly resorted to for sea bathing, being charmingly situated on the south side of the greater Cumbrae, about 4 miles from Largs, in Ayrshire, between which town communication is maintained by means of a regular service of steamers. There is an excellent harbour here and two piers, affording complete facilities for the landing or embarkation of passengers. The town is lighted with gas, and is governed by nine councillors and a senior and two junior magistrates and one police judge. The landward part of the parish is governed by the Cumbrae district committee of the County Council of Bute. A sheriff and small debts court is held in March and September. The Established church here is plain in style, but has a fine square tower. The Episcopal Cathedral and College of the Holy Spirit, situated on an eminence overlooking the town and bay, were founded and partially endowed by the late Earl of Glasgow, and opened in 1850-51; the college is not now used as such, the students attending the Theological College in Edinburgh. The small Episcopal church of St. Andrew, in George street, Millport, was built in 1848, and is served from the cathedral; there are also two United Free churches, and Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels, a Town Hall and a Masonic Lodge. Millport Marine Biological Station, Keppel pier, built and opened in 1897, has been erected and equipped at a cost of about £3,000 for the study of marine biology; the Station contains a suitable working laboratory for the use of students and a museum to illustrate the invertebrate fauna of the district, formed by the late David Robertson LL.D. of this parish, and presented to the Station by his widow. There is a public library in the Town hall, presented by the late James Coats esq. Here are two golf courses and three bowling greens. Some parts of the greater Cumbrae are well cultivated, and here and there may be seen some thriving plantations. On the western side of the lesser Cumbrae is a lighthouse. The greater island of Cumbrae belongs to the Marquess of Bute K.T. who has here a marine pavilion; the smaller island is the property of Evelyn Parker esq. The area of Cumbrae parish comprises 3,511 acres; rateable value, landward £2,226; burgh of Millport, £23,985; the population in 1911 was 1,707, including 1,614 in the burgh of Millport. Population of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,694. The population of Great Cumbrae Island in 1911 was 1,693 and of Little Cumbrae Island, 13.

ROTHESAY is a royal burgh, parish and town, and much frequented watering place on the east coast of the island of Bute, and is the head of a small debts court district; it is 96 miles west from Edinburgh (by Mid-Calder), 40 south-west from Glasgow, 18 south-west from Greenock, 22 north from Lamlash, in the Isle of Arran, 12 north-west from Cumbrae and 9 north-west from Largs. The first mention of it in history is in 1228, when Rothesay Castle was besieged by Husmac, the Norwegian, in conjunction with Olave, King of Man, and taken after a stout resistance. Although recovered from these northern invaders, it was again taken by them about the year 1253 and retaken by the Scots shortly after the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263, in which Alex. III. finally defeated Haco of Norway. During the reign of John Baliol it was seized by the English, but in 1311 surrendered to Robert Bruce. In 1334, Edward Baliol retook the castle and fortified it; but soon afterwards it capitulated to Bruce, then steward of Scotland. King Robert II. visited the castle in 1376, 1381 and 1392, and subsequently created his eldest son, Prince David, Duke of Rothesay, and this has ever since been the principal Scottish title of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales: the Marquess of Bute is hereditary keeper of the castle.

The town, finely situated at the head of Rothesay bay, is the capital of the island of Bute as well as of the shire, and is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works the property of the Corporation; the bay is very spacious, and the anchorage ground excellent. A good esplanade has been constructed, and is now lighted by electricity; the pier, erected in 1882, has been since enlarged, and the harbour greatly improved at considerable expense. The Bute Agricultural Society has done much for the agriculture and farm stock of the island, premiums and prizes for excellence in which are awarded at the annual show of the Society, held at Rothesay on the first Tuesday or Wednesday in May. Rothesay was constituted a royal burgh by Robert III. by a charter dated 12th Jan. 1400; and its privileges were confirmed and extended by James VI. in 1584. The government of the town is now vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and twelve councillors. The sheriff and commissary courts are held every Thursday, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in the months of March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October, and all criminal cases for the circuit court justiciary are tried at Glasgow. There are four Established churches, five United Free churches, a Free church, a Roman Catholic church, a Baptist chapel and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, built in 1838, will seat 232 persons: the Rev. James Morison R. Gladstone M.A. of Glasgow University, has been rector since 1920. The Town Hall and County Buildings, rebuilt at an expense of about £12,000, form a handsome pile, and include an elegant embattled tower containing a bell and a clock, with four illuminated dials, presented by the late Marquess of Bute. The edifice comprises a spacious court room, in which the sheriff, burgh and justice of peace courts are held, the town and sheriff clerks' and procurator fiscal's offices, and other apartments. At the east end of the court room is a painting of John, 2nd Marquess of Bute K.T. (d. 1848), by Mr. Graham Gilbert. The Norman Stewart Institute, in Montague street, opened 4th July, 1885, by Provost Sharp, was erected at a cost of £10,000, derived partly from funds bequeathed by the late Mr. Norman Stewart, of Richmond, Virginia, but mainly contributed by his nephews, Messrs. John, Daniel and Bryce Stewart, of America, and natives of Rothesay. There is a large refreshment room on the ground floor, and on the other floors are reading and writing rooms, a billiard room and recreation and smoking rooms. There are also Masonic and Good Templars' halls, two hospitals, bathing huts and sea water swimming baths, and golf, yachting and bowling clubs, and there is a public park. In front of the east pier stands an elegant fountain, erected as a memorial to H.R.H. the late Prince Consort, who died 14th Dec. 1861, and another fountain stands in Guildford square. The Rothesay Academy, on the hill overlooking West Bay, was erected and partially endowed by the trustees of the late Duncan Thomson esq. and is a structure in the Gothic style. It is now under the control of the Buteshire Education Authority. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland; also several hotels. A nominal weekly market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the Thursday before 26th May (hiring), third Wednesday and the following Thursday in July (horse), Thursday before 24th November (hiring) and Tuesday before Kilbarchan December fair (horse). Two newspapers are published here—the "Buteman and West Coast Chronicle" and the "Rothesay Express." On an eminence, called "Chapel Hill," rising above Argyle street, once stood an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Bride. The Marquis of Bute K.T. is the principal landowner. About 2 miles south-west, and at the end of the Chapelton road, is Woodend, or (as it is more generally denominated) "Kean's Cottage," from having been built by Edmund Kean, the eminent tragedian; the house stands in a retired spot a little above the western shore of Loch Fad. The area of the civil parish and burgh is 2,439 acres; rateable value, £89,511; the population in 1901 was 9,378, and in 1911, 9,299, including 52 shipping and 97 in Bellevue Orphanage. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 4,782.

CRAIGMORE is a quoad sacra parish, formed February 21st, 1902, from Rothesay and Kingarth. Population in 1911, 1,060.

NEW CHURCH is a quoad sacra parish, formed 13th March, 1871. Population in 1911, 3,788.

CAITHNESS-SHIRE

THIS is the most northerly county of Great Britain, lying on the north-eastern extremity of Scotland. It is bounded on the east and south-east by the North Sea, on the south-west and west by Sutherlandshire, while on the north the Atlantic Ocean, bringing with it a portion of the Gulf Stream, after passing along two-thirds of the coast, sweeps at the rate of ten miles an hour through the Pentland Firth, the strait dividing the eastern portion of the coast from the Orkney Islands, and forms to the west of Duncans Bay Head the whirlpool known as the Boars of Duncansby. In figure the county approaches to that of a triangle, being from the Ord of Caithness to Dunnet Head, the northern cape, about 37 miles, and from near Reay to Auchingill on the east coast (its widest part) about 27, the entire coast line being 100 miles; altogether it comprehends an area of 438,833 acres of land and 7,139 of water. This county in point of size ranks as the thirteenth, and in population as the twenty-second, having a population in 1901 of 33,870 and in 1911, 32,010, viz.:—Males, 15,156; females, 16,854; the number of houses in 1911 was:—Inhabited, 7,630; uninhabited, 472; building, 14.

The county contains a large number of forts or castles (chiefly ruins now) along its coast, it having been from an early period subject to the attacks of the Northmen and other enemies coming seaward.

The Early History of this county is of little or no interest, owing to its distance from the central part of the kingdom. It was anciently inhabited by the "Catinii," from whom the present appellation is supposed to be derived. The names of various places and the monumental remains indicate its having been the theatre of numerous petty exploits of the Danes and Norwegians. The ruins of Castle Sinclair and Girnego, the remains of old chapels, and other relics of antiquity combine to prove that this district was inhabited at an early date. Caithness is an earldom in the family of Sinclair. This peerage is of remote antiquity; before the year 1450 it was enjoyed by three successive families, who lost it either by forfeiture or extinction. At length it was renewed, in the person of William Sinclair, Earl of Orkney, a great-grandson, by the female line, of Robert II.; he was made Chancellor of Scotland in the reign of James II. and received a grant of the earldom of Caithness. The earldom of Orkney having been derived from the King of Norway, though confirmed by a Scottish monarch, was resigned to the Crown in the reign of James III. After a long period the title was revived, but not in the family of the Sinclairs of Caithness.

Soil, Surface, Produce, Climate &c.—The county is in general level, with a few mountains on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and some eminences of trifling altitude throughout. The soil is chiefly devoted to tillage, and in the centre and along the sea border is moderately fertile. This district is nearly destitute of wood, and the few enclosures are but of a rude quality. The greatest elevations in this county above the level of the sea are, Morven, 2,313 feet; Maiden Pap, 1,580 feet; Scarry Ben, 2,054 feet; and Ord of Caithness, 1,250 feet. Although improvements have certainly been effected, much remains to be done to raise the condition of Caithness-shire to that of the adjacent counties. Since the year 1809 a better system of farming has been introduced, and the number of roads throughout the county has been augmented. Though black cattle form an article of consideration, this is rather an agricultural than a grazing county; clover and turnips are pretty broadly cultivated; the crops of grain are mostly limited to oats and barley.

The crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Barley, including bere, 1,196 acres; oats, 31,894 acres; total of corn crops, 33,093 acres; cabbage, 15 acres; potatoes, 1,413 acres; turnips and swedes, 11,903 acres; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 265 acres. The area of the county is 438,833 acres, of which 215,390 acres is mountain and heath land, used for grazing; permanent pasture, 24,669 acres; arable land, 82,541 acres.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 539; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 960; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 479; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 213; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 167; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 89; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 76; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 102; above 300 acres, 56; total, 2,681.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 4,005 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,694; other horses, 6,149; cows in milk, 5,974; cows in calf but not in milk, 429; heifers in calf, 374; other cattle, two years and above, 2,130; one year and under two, 5,471; under one year, 5,428; ewes kept for breeding, 54,119; other sheep, one year and above, 18,713; under one year, 48,876; sows kept for breeding, 207; other pigs, 1,559. Besides cattle and corn, kelp, salmon, cod, herrings, bacon, with some butter and cheese, and a considerable quantity of wool, comprise the articles of exportation; the imports being foreign timber, coal, salt, flour and general merchandise. The mountains abound with red deer and various kinds of game, and the district throughout with hares, rabbits, grouse, plovers &c. In the caverns along the coast seals form their harbours; the hunters enter in small boats, with torches, and with loud shouts alarm the animals, which they kill with clubs as they attempt to pass into the sea.

This county has no coal, and the principal fuel of the inhabitants is peat.

According to the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics for 1919, Part III." the only minerals raised were: gravel and sand, 1,938 tons, and sandstone, 5,215 tons.

The white and herring fishery is prosecuted with success, and the curing of fish is another branch of trade in which many persons are engaged. The number of fishing boats registered December 31st, 1918, at the port of Wick, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act," was 574, with an aggregate tonnage of 3,904. The climate, though by no means genial and mild, is temperate, considering its high latitude (fifty-ninth degree), where the duration of the night at one period of the year is 19 hours.

Rivers, Lakes, Railways &c.—In the interior there are upwards of 30 small fresh water lakes, from which flow a number of streamlets and some waters of greater magnitude; the principal being the Isauld, Forss and Thurso rivers on the north-west, the latter formed by the junction of the Moore and the Beg, which rise on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and the Wick, Dunn and Berrydale on the south-east. The most extensive loch is the Watten, a fine sheet of water, about 3 miles in length, from which issues a branch of the river Wick. The only bays of note are Sinclair Bay, on the north-east, and Dunnet Bay, on the north. The Highland railway, which after running close to the east coast of Sutherlandshire as far as Helmsdale has to make a detour of nearly 25 miles to the north before it can find a way through the hills which form the border of Caithness, passes into the county a little east of Forsinard station, and runs north-east to Georgemas junction, north-west of Spittal Hill, where it divides into two branches, one running north to Thurso, the other east to Wick and Lybster. In connection with the railway steamers run to the Orkneys.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Caithness-shire was anciently a bishopric, the earliest traces of which refer its origin to the 12th century; at present it contains ten parishes, which constitute a presbytery. The shire contains ten civil parishes, one royal burgh—Wick, and a police burgh—Thurso. The counties of Caithness and Sutherland send one member to Parliament. The number of the electors entered on the county parliamentary register in 1919 was 22,469.

CASTLETOWN is a small village at the foot of Dunnet Bay, in the parish of Olrig, poor combination and small debt court district of Thurso, and is 15 miles north-west from Wick and 5½ east of Thurso station on the Highland line. There are Established, United Free and Free churches, and four schools. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited each have a branch here. In the immediate vicinity of the village is the estate of Castlehill, from which is quarried an excellent kind of stone, adapted to the purposes of flooring and flagging footways &c.; it lies in beds of from three-quarters of an inch to six inches in thickness; blocks have often been raised measuring 100 superficial feet; hence they are carried to the shore, where they are prepared and dressed, previous to shipping, to facilitate which a small and convenient harbour has been formed. Olrig House, under Olrig Hill, an eminence of 465 feet in the south-west of the parish, is the residence of Peter Keith esq. J.P. The trustees of the late Hon. Mrs. Madelina Pelham Sinclair (d. 1910), the trustees of the late James William Traill esq. and Peter Keith esq are the principal landowners. The area of Olrig parish is 10,025 acres; rateable value, £5,746; population in 1911, 1,450; the population of Castletown parish ward in 1911 was 846.
